Hon. Ernest C. Manning, acting premier, provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry, who was back at his office Monday after a two weeks' training period at Sarcee Camp, southwest of Calgary, with the 2nd Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, (R)CA, in which he is commissioned as a lieutenant.

Edmonton Flier Safe In Crash: Two Are Killed

CALGARY, Aug. 18.—(CP)—For 44 hours LAC. A. M. R. McGruther, 32, son of Mr. and Mrs. William McGruther, 9634 85 avenue, Edmonton, patiently waited rescuers after the crash of a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber on a mountainside had left him the lone survivor of a crew of three.

Hungry, weak from injuries, he rested in a Calgary hospital today after a search party chopped their way through tangled undergrowth and crags to the 7,000 foot level of Mount McDougall where they found the airman Saturday sitting beside the wreckage, nursing his fractured leg.

BODIES NEARBY

Nearby were the bodies of F/O. I. M. Sutherland Brown, 22, of Victoria, instructor, and LAC. F. W. Greenfield, 22, of Madison, Sask., who were killed instantly when their Avro-Anson machine smashed into a shoulder of the mountain. 50

Women Recruits May Now Apply

By THOMAS WAYLING

Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—Recruits for defence force auxiliaries must make application to supervisor national war services, Ottawa, so Major General L. R. LaFleche stated today clarifying the women's recruiting situation.

Recruits should state which service they wish to join, army, navy or air. Very few recruits are wanted for the navy so they may be asked to give a second choice or whether they want to go on the waiting list.

Army and air force set ups are practically complete and the first calls for recruits is out. Application forms will be ready within the next few days, and will be sent to applicants on request. Recruits for each district or command will be chosen as far as is possible from the applicants from those areas. It is stressed that applications to local headquarters are futile, the offer must be made in writing to Otawa.

Russ Attacks Kill 25,000 Nazis

MOSCOW, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Powerful Red army counter-attacks, costing the Germans at least 25,000 men on the central and northern Ukrainian front, were reported today by the Russians while acknowledging loss in the south of their big shipbuilding port of Nikolaev and the mining centre of Krivoi Rog.

In addition the Russians said their troops had crippled at least three other divisions said to have been beaten back after losses of 30 to 50 per cent. of their normal fighting strength of 43,500 men.

Thus the Red army was hitting back full strength against the northern flank of the long wedge the Nazis were driving past Odessa and east toward the hydro-elec'ric power centre of Dnieperopetrovsk at the Dnieper river bend.

CARRIES OUT POLICY

A Moscow communique issued at mid-day reported that "During the night of August 17-18 our troops continued to fight the enemy along the entire front." It named no specific centres of fighting.

The midnight communique which acknowledged the Russian withdrawal from Nikolaev and Krivoi Rog said defence forces carried out Stalin's scorched earth order before falling back. The vast Nikolaev dockyards, where the Bug river empties into the Black sea, were blown up.

Red Star, organ of the Red army, said the Germans lost 20,000 dead and wounded in a fierce Russian counter-attack which saved a Ukraine town identified as "K" (possibly Kiev).

IN the eight weeks since Hitler hurled his mighty war machine against Russia it has ripped its way through Soviet buffer defences from the Baltic to the Black Sea and stormed into Russia itself an average depth of perhaps 100 miles on a 1,000-mile front; but it has signally failed as yet to achieve or closely to approach the quick and earth - shaking victory the Nazi war lord foretold.

R.A.F. Fires Bremen, Duisburg In Heavy Raids During Weekend

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(CP)—A large number of Royal Air Force fighters and bombers swept across the English Channel in a large scale operation tonight from several bases on the southeast coast.

Coastal observers said they saw great masses of machines sweeping toward the French coast and the fighters were described as flying in layers so high they could hardly be seen.

The bombers, closely guarded by Hurricanes and Spitfires, returned an hour later.

LOSE ONLY ONE PLANE

The R.A.F. started many fires last night in the German port of Bremen and the industrial area around Duisburg on the Rhine. One British bomber was lost of more than 100 taking part in the raids.

Included in the week-end of smashing assaults were attacks on the French, Netherlands and Belgian coastal areas.

It was the second successive night assault on the Duisburg district despite unfavorable weather. Large forces of bombers braved bad weather and anti-aircraft barrages Saturday night to drop super-bombs on the Rhineland industrial cities of Cologne, Duesseldorf and Duisburg. Docks at Rotterdam and Ostend also were blasted.

Large factories were left burning Saturday night in the attacks on the Rhineland. Thirteen British planes were lost, while a Nazi fighter was shot down by an attacking bomber.

A few German planes were over Britain last night, the air ministry said, bombing several coastal points. One plane was shot down.

Nine persons were killed and several injured when the raiders bombed a densely-populated residential district of Hull.

Large numbers of Nazi planes approached the port, these reports said, but all but a few were prevented by R.A.F. fighters from getting through.

Officials said the R.A.F. lost 76 planes in the week ended Sunday morning, which they considered satisfactory in view of the large number of planes used.

Commentators said the R.A.F. had shown it could now take the offensive day or night for losses smaller than those of the Nazi air force last year in the battle of Britain.

Axis losses were put at eight bombers and 39 fighters during the week.

It also announced a British convoy was attacked yesterday but escaped. One German bomber was brought down and two others damaged in the assault.

Churchill Returns Safely To U.K. After Sea Meeting

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill returned to Britain safely today from an historic meeting at sea with President Roosevelt and a visit to Iceland, and was met by Information Minister Brendan Bracken to complete arrangements for a probable broadcast by the Prime Minister. The date for the broadcast has not been announced.

British and United States troops assigned to Iceland were inspected by Mr. Churchill on his way back from the Atlantic rendezvous.

As Mr. Churchill and his party drove to a special train in three motor cars, persons in the streets cheered and shouted "best of luck."

The Prime Minister smiled and waved his hat.

"He looked very happy indeed," a spectator said.

The Prime Minister returned in the battleship Prince of Wales, which carried him to the historic meeting with the President of the United States. The port of arrival was not made public.

MEET CLOSE TO SHORE

The Prime Minister was expected to return to London later today.

A British film of the meeting of President and Prime Minister showed at least one of their talks was held close to shore.

A rocky coastline was distinguishable in the background of a picture showing Mr. Churchill

BRITISH PREPARE AGAINST POSSIBLE NAZI ATTACK

By BRYDON TAVES

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone, Aug. 18.—(BUP)—The British are building strong defences in Sierra Leone, their West African colony which has an abominable climate but may assume enormous strategic importance if the Germans get control of Dakar in French West Africa.

Dakar is only 600 miles away. There has been no authentic confirmation of reports that Germans are already there; British merchant ship officers who escaped from Dakar last month said they had seen none.

But the British are taking no chances because, for one thing, they know that Dakar is controlled by French naval officers who are frankly hostile to Britain.

ATTACK EXPECTED

French airplanes periodically reconnoiter over Freetown, which is regarded as one of the six most important British naval bases outside of the United Kingdom, and several times British officers thought the fort was about to be attacked.

They believe that if the Germans occupy Dakar in force, British and Free French forces could form a line of defence here against a Nazi attempt to span the south Atlantic ocean to invade South America.

Of more immediate importance is the role Freetown plays in protecting British shipping in the South Atlantic. Warships of all sizes are based in the swampy estuary of the Sierra Leone River to guard the sea route to Capetown. Over this route Britain sends convoys to the Middle East and India. Heavy guns protect the harbor and native troops, capable of fighting in Africa's feverridden jungles, are under training.

Sierra Leone has been called "the white man's grave." It is extremely hot and humid. There's more rain in August than falls in the eastern part of Canada in a year. Britons say 18 months is about as long as any white man can stand it here.

British authorities believe it unlikely that Great Britain and the United States ever would permit the Germans to establish a base at Dakar without a fight. Even if such an attempt succeeded, experts say it would avail the Nazis little so long as Sierra Leone and Gambia, its sis ey colony, remain in British hands.

Report Hitler Mental Condition Gets Worse

By HOMER JENKS

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(BUP)—A radio Moscow dispatch from Switzerland today, according to Exchange Telegraph, purported to cite indications that Adolf Hitler's "mental condition" had deteriorated since the first German setback on the Russian front. The dispatch lacked any confirmation from other sources.

The dispatch said that Prof. Ferdinand Sauerbruch, a specialist in nervous diseases, had conferred with two Swiss psychologists regarding Hitler's health.

The dispatch claimed that Hitler had been forced to leave the Russian front and was not at Berchtesgaden, where the doctors had decided that he must not be told any "bad news."

(According to Berlin dispatches, Hitler still had his headquarters at the eastern front today.)

5 Die As Great Fire Destroys Brooklyn Pier

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Five men were killed, considerable property damage was caused and a number of seamen were feared dead today in a fire which swept a section of the Brooklyn waterfront.

The blaze, touched off by a series of lightning-like explosions, destroyed the Cuba mail line freighter Panuco, a 1,900-foot Cuba mail line pier, and damaged an adjoining pier and several craft assisting in the unloading of a highly inflammable cargo from the Panuco.

PROBE SABOTAGE

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine said he feared "many more men or bodies" were aboard the flaming Panuco which was towed into the East river after she caught fire.

He said 26 men were fished out of the river, five of them, longshoremen, were dead and 22 were taken to hospital.

Situation Believed To Be Critical

TOKYO, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Reliable indications a Russian far eastern army of great strength has been fully mobilized and stationed on the Siberian border and an hours'-long conference between United States Ambassador Joseph Grew and Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda stressed the critical situation in the Pacific tonight.

Significantly, Domei started off its European and American broadcasts with a discussion of rumored plans of the Chinese leader, Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, to visit Moscow, interpreting such plans as evidence of China's weakness and the effectiveness of Japan's blockade.

The whole Japanese press splashed reports under London datelines that Chiang would visit Moscow.

The Grew-Toyoda meeting was reported of the utmost importance although there was no inkling of what they discussed.

"INCITING" RUSSIA

The Japan Times and Advertiser, commenting on the effect on Japan of the Churchill-Roosevelt meeting, said plans for "joint military action against Japan apparently include Soviet Russia". It saw in the Anglo-

Farmers May Take Purple Gas On Road

Farmers carrying on harvest operations with tractors and other farm equipment in which the special purple-colored gasoline is used, will not be interfered with even though they have to move across or along a highway from one farm to another, Hon. Ernest C. Manning, acting premier, provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry announced Monday.

The purple-colored gasoline is supplied to farmers for use in tractors on the farm, at a tax of only one cent a gallon instead of the seven cents a gallon imposed for motor car and other uses.

The act prohibits the use of this gasoline on the highways and restricts it to the farm.

Now that the harvesting season is in full swing and combines and tractors are moving from farm to farm, the province deemed inadvisable to make operators drain tanks, put in other fuel, go to another farm and drain once more and fill in with purple-colored fuel oil.

It was pointed out that one farmer was moving from only one farm to another 90 miles away. Such a distance is not considered within the "reasonable" distance category and officials are enabled to use their discretion.

NAZI GERMANY FACES COLOSSAL ASSEMBLAGE OF POWER

Three - Power Allied Bloc Seals Doom Of Adolf Hitler

Russian Alliance With Britain, U. S. Promises Hope For World Humanity

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

LONDON, Aug. 18.—(CDN)—Nazi Germany today faced the most colossal assemblage of power and potential power ever amassed by any group of allies.

In the opinion of the British and their Allies, Soviet Premier Josef V. Stalin's acceptance of the invitation addressed to him by British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, to lay aside old suspicions and to join wholeheartedly in a three-powered bloc, has sealed the doom of Adolf Hitler and everything for which Der Fuehrer stands.

Incidentally, they feel that it provides the promise of a postwar world in which, for the first time since the dawn of history the three greatest powers in the world will be working as one for the maintenance of security and the improvement of the material lot of world humanity.

EXCLUSIVE

IMPORTANT OUTCOME

The announcement that Churchill and Roosevelt had invited Stalin to form what amounts to a three-power bloc for the annihilation of Nazism struck London as the most important single outcome of the Anglo-American Atlantic conference. Whatever the technical position, the message to Moscow definitely associated the United States, which is technically a non-belligerent, with the two leading belligerent powers opposed to Germany.

As the immediate result of the invitation and Stalin's acceptance, Britain, Russia and the neutral United States will, for the first time since September, 1939, be able to conceive and very possibly to execute a clearcut, hardhitting complete plan for the actual military annihilation of the Axis and any other nations which may join it. The beginnings of such a plan must have been roughly formulated for the first time at the Atlantic conference. Yet, without Russia's full co-operation, such a plan would scarcely have included a feasible scheme for beating Italy and Germany on land during the immediate future.

ACTUAL POSSIBILITY

In the opinion of British military experts, with Russia's full co-operation and with skilful utilization of Russian, British and American resources according to a well calculated plan, the actual defeat of the Reichswehr in the field within the next year or two should become an actual possibility.

The long-term implications of complete co-operation between Russia, on the one hand, and the United States and Great Britain on the other, are so tremendous that people are almost afraid to contemplate them. They promise to affect Russia herself as nothing else since the revolution has done.

In the view of people who have been intimately acquainted with the Soviet experiment and the Soviet Regime, honest and frank co-operation between the Soviet Union and the Western democracies in this war may eventually give to Russia a greater measure of free dom in the British-American sense of the term than she had ever had in her history.

MENTAL WALL

The curse of Soviet Russia, as well as of Imperial Russia, has been the mental wall which has separated her from western ideas. That wall has remained during the last 24 years because of the Bolshevik suspicion of capitalism and Bolshevik memories of the civil war and intervention a quarter of a century back. At times there was a modicum of friendship between Russia and Germany, based largely on the secret agreement between the Red army and the Reichswehr, and at one time there was something approaching friendship between Russia and the United States, based on technical and commercial co-operation during the period of Soviet industrialization.

Now, if the Moscow conference is to produce any results at all, there must be the fullest collaboration, not only between the military chiefs but also between the political heads of the United States, Britain and Russia.

In itself, that collaboration will demand a degree of mutual trust such as has never existed between the Soviet Union and any capitalistic power. If that collaboration is successful, it will result in saving the Soviet Union and the Soviet experiment from virtual extinction and that will admittedly be due in great measure to the honest friendship and assistance of the two greatest capitalistic powers on earth—the British Empire and the United States.

HONEST CO-OPERATION

This is not taken by anybody to mean that the Soviet Union is to become completely western in its ideas, overnight, or that the basic conflict between Bolshevik theory and British-American economic and political ideas is to be erased. Unless the tripartite consultations are a farce, however, it will mean that honest and wholehearted co-operation between the Soviet Union and the western world will become a reality for the first time since the October revolution.

U.S. Firm To Ferry Planes To Africa

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt announced today that the delivery of planes to British forces in the Middle East would be speeded through a ferry system conducted by Pan American Airways.

A White House announcement said the system would provide "direct and speedy delivery" of aircraft from what Mr. Roosevelt has termed the "arsenal of democracy" to a critical point in the front against aggression.

The importance of this direct line of communication to strategic outposts in Africa, it said, can not be overestimated.

Under the agreement with Pan American, the system will ferry aircraft from United States to West Africa, and then on to the Middle East.

Pan American is establishing an air transport service from West Africa to the Middle East and plans are under way for a similar service from this country to West Africa.

The White House said government-owned planes, operated by American personnel, would be used, and that the delivery route would not pass through the zone of actual warfare.

Churchill Back In Britain From Meeting At Sea

watching from the battleship Prince of Wales as a United States destroyer carried President Roosevelt away.

The President, it was disclosed here, visited the British battleship only once. That was Sunday, Aug. 10. He came aboard for religious services and sang, with Mr. Churchill, "Land of Hope and Glory" and "Onward Christian Soldiers."

During the services, he was said, patrolling planes droned overhead, sometimes drowning out the singing and music from the Marine band of the British battleship and U.S. destroyer.

U.S. sailors accompanied the President to the British battleship and engaged in back-slapping with the British tars, to whom they brought presents of fruit and cigarettes.

The President also brought presents—one for every member of the ship's crew. Each bore a card which said "Best wishes. Franklin D. Roosevelt."

The U.S. sailors, like the President, remained for lunch on the battleship. Afterward they sent over hams, eggs and butter to replace food they had eaten.

BLACK CAT EPISODE

The film of the meeting showed a black cat episode as the President left. The cat, a Prince of Wales mascot, ventured onto a gangplank from the battleship to the destroyer and sat there purring while the President and his party side-stepped by.

The Press Association said Mr. Churchill began the journey by train from London, going to a British port where he boarded a destroyer that took him to the ship.

Naval personnel and others at the port were sworn to secrecy about the trip and none knew where he was going.

The Prime Minister wore his hat at a jaunty angle and puffed a cigar as he stood on the destroyer's bridge when she put out to sea.

Mr. Churchill then transferred to the flagship King George V where he was received by Admiral Sir John Tovey. He lunched on the flagship, then transferred to the Prince of Wales for the Atlantic journey.

STOPS AT ICELAND

(The B.B.C. heard in New York said Mr. Churchill stopped at Iceland on his way back and inspected British and U.S. troops.

(President Roosevelt's gift to each man on the Prince of Wales was a carton of cigarettes, some fruit and a half pound of cheese.)

The party of 10 distinguished men who went with Mr. Churchill included the newly-created peer, Lord Cherwell, inventor of the balloon barrage, formerly known as Prof. Frederick Lindemann.

Destroyers from the home fleet escorted the Prince of Wales on the outward trip and others steamed out to bring her back.

In contrast to President Roosevelt's heralded return to Maine and his prompt press conference the Prime Minister slipped in secretly to avoid a possible potshot by a German raider.

FREDERICTON, Aug. 18.—(CP)—Infantile paralysis caused the third death in a week in New Brunswick Saturday when a 17-year-old boy died in hospital here Saturday. It was the eighth death in New Brunswick's month-old infantile paralysis epidemic.

Roosevelt And Churchill Meet At Sea

In a historic meeting somewhere on the broad Atlantic, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, left, talks with Prime Minister Winston Churchill of England aboard the British battleship Prince of Wales. The epic meeting of the two statesmen resulted in an eight-point declaration of peace aims founded on "final destruction of Nazi tyranny."

Y.M.C.A. To Build Hut At Red Deer

CALGARY, Aug. 18.—(CP)—The Y.M.C.A. will build an auxiliary service hut at the R.C.A.S.C camp in Red Deer, it was announced jointly this morning by H. W. Kingerley, provincial director of Y. M. C. A. war services, and Captain Fred Crumblehulme, officer in charge of auxiliary war services for M.D. 13.

It was pointed out that the hut will be built in the army camp and is not connected with the one that the citizens of Red Deer have requested for the town itself. The city of Red Deer had offered to pay half the cost, up to $5,000, of building a service hut in the town to accommodate troops. This request had previously been considered by the "Y," but the national finance committee has not given official approval to date.

Congress To Be Asked To Boost Lease-Lend Fund

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Senator Tom Connally (Dem., Texas) predicted after a White House conference on international affairs today that Congress would be asked to appropriate in the neighborhood of $4,000,000,000 additional for the lease-lend program "if and when the money is needed."

Connally, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, talked with reporters after receiving from President Roosevelt, in company with other congressional leaders, a picture of the President's dramatic conference at sea with Prime Minister Churchill.

NO CLOSER TO WAR

The Texas Senator said Mr. Roosevelt gave the group a complete outline of his conference.

"I do not believe," Connally declared, "that any commitments were made at the conference which in any way would alter our position toward the war.

"I do not believe that we have drifted any closer to actual involvement."

Saying that speculation on a projected new lease-lend appropriation had placed the probable figure at "much too high," Connally said the figure probably would be approximately $4,000,000,000.

"By far the greater part of the original $7,000,000,000 lease-lend appropriation has not yet been expended," he declared.

charged by Red troops which hurled them back six to eight miles on battlefields strewn with dead. The Russian forces were reported still advancing.

Farther north, on the central front, Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's defenders of the road to Moscow were reported to have hurled other Nazi troops back in large-scale counter attacks.

Indicating the intensity of guerilla operations in territory behind the German-Finnish lines, the Bureau of Information reported:

"In the course of the past few days alone guerilla detachments blew up eight bridges, engineered 21 train wrecks, destroyed 25 planes, 18 tanks, 72 trucks and four armored cars, and killed 400 soldiers and 38 officers."

Moscow had its 20th air-raid alarm of the war during the night but the Russians said the raiders were dispersed west of the city by night fighters and the fire of camouflaged, disappearing batteries of anti-aircraft guns which guard the capital.

NAZIS CLAIM RUSS RETREAT IN UKRAINE

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—(AP)—The German high command claimed today Red army forces in the southern Ukraine have fallen still farther back toward the lower Dnieper and their flight has become in part a rout. The war bulletin from Hitler's headquarters "thus again in vague language claimed further deterioration of Russian defences on the southern flank of the eastern front and reported "considerable results" in operations elsewhere in Russia.

The Black Sea naval base and grain port of Nikolaev, Germany's biggest prize in the 38-day-old campaign was occupied during the week-end, and the Germans claimed to be closing in around the port of Odessa.

German night raiders attacked Moscow and several rail lines, the communique said.

The German public heard of the capture of Nikolaev Sunday from the high command which at the same time announced the Red army had been cleaned out from the Krivoi Rog iron-producing region 100 miles to the northeast.

British Continue Raids At Tobruk

CAIRO, Aug. 18.—(AP)—The British middle east command said today patrols from the besieged Libyan port of Tobruk were continuing offensive operations against the Axis lines, "steadily inflicting losses upon the enemy." Considerable bombing of the defence works by German and Italian planes was reported.

Britain, Russia Co-Operating On Business Basis

MOSCOW, Aug. 18 — (AP) — Signing of a British-Russian commercial and economic accord providing for a large scale exchange of goods and putting the Allies' co-operation on a business basis was announced last night.

Signing of the British-Russian agreement followed extension of the Russian-United States trade treaty for a year while preparations were being made by Premier Joseph Stalin for a tri-power conference in Moscow to decide upon the distribution of military resources.

TAKE EVERY MEASURE

Stalin agreed to take all necessary steps as soon as possible for such a council of war at Moscow, it was announced Saturday. The proposal was made Friday in a message delivered by the British and United States ambassador, Sir Stafford Cripps and Laurence A. Steinhardt, from Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

Then, Soviet news agency, said Stalin conveyed his "cordial gratitude" for their readiness to render aid to the Soviet in its war against Germany, and said he was ready to take "every measure in order that this conference be held as soon as possible."

The Anglo-Russian commercial agreement was promptly hailed by observers here and in London as proof that London and Moscow "mean business."

A communique said:

"On the 16 signature took place in Moscow to an agreement on the turnover of goods, credit and clearing between the U.S.S.R. and England.

CREDIT IS GRANTED

"The agreement provides for the supply of considerable quantities of British goods to the U.S.S.R. as well as for the supply of certain Soviet goods to England.

"Under the agreement England grants the U.S.S.R. credit of £10,000,000 ($45,000,000) for payment in goods at the rate of three per cent per annum for a mean period of five years.

"When said amount of credit is almost expired the governments will enter negotiations for the purpose of increasing the amount of credit.

"Payment between the parties is regulated on a clearing basis."

The agreement was signed on be half of the Soviet government by the peoples Commissar of Foreign Trade, A. I. Mikoyan, and for the British government, by Sir Stafford Cripps in Russian at 1 p.m. Saturday.

MISSION CHIEF ATTENDS

The ceremony was attended by Lawrence Cadbury, chief of the British economic mission and other members of the mission, who are remaining in Moscow to oversee execution of the accord.

Observers here said they understood Britain was sending rubber, tin, wool, hides, jute, shellac and industrial diamonds in exchange for Soviet platinum, hemp, flax, manganese, glycerine and timber.

A protocol to the agreement is being negotiated by the Soviet Peoples Bank and the Bank of England.

The economic mission which arranged the accord has been in Moscow since June 27, five days after the start of the German-Russian war.

ROYAL AIR FORCE PLAYS GREAT BIG GAME

But It's Vital To Defence Of The United Kingdom

Operations Room Reveals How Battle Of Britain Is Going In One Brief Glance

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

ROYAL AIR FORCE GROUP HEADQUARTERS, Somewhere in France, July 31.—(By Clipper)—(CDN)—Your first impression is that the Royal Air Force has taken a day off for a game of roulette.

A dozen men and girls, earphones clamped to their heads, stand around a giant table map of the British Isles. Each holds a long wand, with a magnetic knob at the end. With the same swift, easy movements of the people who rake it in at Monte Carlo they reach across the map, putting small colored arrows and other markers in place. Occasionally somebody takes something that looks like a desk calendar out of a drawer and shoves it across the shiny surface.

It is no game that they are playing, though it is just as interesting and far more important than the biggest attack on the bank that Monte Carlo ever experienced.

"OPERATIONS ROOM"

This is the "operations room" of ons of the R.A.F.'s group headquarters. Those earphones are bringing in news from all over the British Isles, from headquarters of the fighter command, from members of the Volunteer Observer Corps, perched in lookouts from Land's End to John o'Groats, from anti-aircraft batteries, from the admiralty and finally from Britain's highly advertised "radio location."

EXCLUSIVE

The things that look like desk calendars are either enemy raiders or British fighters sent out to intercept them or planes of doubtful identity which have to be watched. From the control balcony with a pair of old opera glasses, we can tell how many planes there are in each group, whose they are, and how high they're flying. A supplementary blackboard on the wall shows how fast each group is travelling. The little arrows show which direction they are taking.

Other symbols show the whereabouts of every convoy and every single ship along the coast.

In one brief glance you can tell just how the battle of Britain is going at this moment. It is the sort of thing that any city editor in the world would give his eye teeth to have in the office.

It is a nasty day and little or nothing is happening except a lively "dummy" raid which they are putting on to train the personnel. But down off the southeast coast, in another group, there is real action. Two symbols indicate that two groups of German planes are cruising above the Channel. Two other symbols over near Dover show that two sections of Spitfires are waiting for them.

CONVOYS PASSING

Two ship-shaped pieces of cardboard pointed in opposite directions show that two British convoys are passing one another off Dungeness. A little girl in her 'teens, wearing the snappy outfit of a W.A.A.F., leans over and moves the German squadrons toward the convoys.

The British squadrons move south. It looks as though somebody is going to get hurt. Then as the British and German squadrons converge on the convoy the Germans retire. The Spitfires seem to have driven them off.

The interesting thing about all of this is that nobody could possibly have seen those German planes and the British Spitfires with the naked eye. Yet the authorities knew where the planes were, how high they were flying and more or less how many there were. That is where "radio location" comes in. All of those things were discovered by the still highly secret beam devices of the radio location system, they were discovered in good time, and past experience says that they were discovered with accuracy.

TOUGHEST JOBS

Up here on the control balcony of the group headquarters and here deep in the bowels of the earth—sit the men with the best and toughest jobs of all, the men who direct actual operations of the R.A.F. fighter squadrons, the anti-aircraft batteries, and the air-raid alarm systems of the whole group area.

There may be squadrons of Spitfires, Hurricanes and Boulton Paul Defiants in this group and it is up to young officers who sit up here, with their eyes on the room below, to use them to the best advantage. The sudden appearance of a "desk calendar" somewhere out in the North Sea brings instant action.

On the far wall of the room a battery of bulletin boards shows the situation at each fighter station in the group. Colored lights indicate how many two-plane sections are available, whether they are "standing by" or on "15 minutes' notice" or what they are doing, and how many planes are in the air. The map shows where British fighters are on patrol.

REPEATS ORDER

A comely young lady flips a switch, the control officer says "patrol over blank at 15,000 feet," somebody at a distant fighter air drome repeats the order and the job of interception is under way. This officer is boss; if German formations get through this area he must be able to explain why. He must think like lightning, think clearly and combine patience and amiability. Ten or fifteen million people, plus several hundred young fighter pilots, are depending upon him.

In another glassed-in chambe, looking down on the operation room are the men and girls who run the air-raid warning systems. They get all of the information that the others get and it is up to them to sound the sirens in towns which are in the path of a developing attack.

If they guess badly and sound an alarm in some town which is not attacked they catch it from the local officers and from their superiors. If they fail to warn a town which is attacked, ditto. If they guess right everybody takes it for granted and they get no medals.

On the spot all of this seems like a great big game. In fact, 650 German planes have been shot down in this group area since the beginning of the war. They were shot down largely due to brain work, and here are the brains. It is fun but it is effective.

Interpreting War News

lions of helpless non-combatants are dead or homeless and faced with freezing and starvation this winter.

Yet no Russian city of first magnitude strategically or economically has yet fallen to the invading hordes; none been brought under Nazi fire except by air bombs. And only days away are the September rains in western Russia and behind them, in early October, the snow will fly and Russia's great ally, six months of winter, will enter the struggle.

As the ninth week of the vast battle opens, Hitler's armies seem breathless and nearing the exhaustion point in the vital centre before Moscow. Only on the extreme flanks of the Baltic-Black Sea front is the Nazi blitzkrieg still rolling and neither sector offers the Germans an assurance of conclusive victory before winter sets in.

Only the southern Ukraine and its potential resources in food and minerals seems yet within his grasp and its cost has been a great expenditure of German lives and German war reserves. Odessa is the first major Russian city to be closely invested by the Nazis.

Complete annihilation of Red army forces in the sea-backed Odessa pocket seems improbable. Routes of escape by land and sea are still open.

It seems unquestionable that Hitler is desperately seeking to achieve in the Ukraine an appearance of victory on which to found some new peace offensive.

miles southwest of Cagary, shortly after leaving Calgary Thursday afternoon on a routine instrument test flight. The airmen were members of the No. 3 Service Flying Training School of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Given food and drink and first aid, searchers carried McGruther 12 miles over the newly-made trail to an ambulance which had moved six miles into the forest over a roadway chopped by R.C.A.F. ground parties and volunteer woodsmen.

McGruther, the son of W. McGruther, president of the Civil Servants' Association of Alberta, said he was unable to get emergency rations from the plane, but was able to hobble down to a creek for water several times while waiting for rescue.

CLIPS TREE TOP

He was encouraged, however, by actions of planes flying overhead and said he believed they had spotted the wreckage. A physician who accompanied the searchers urged the airman to rest and would not let him talk.

Wing Cmdr. A. D. Ross, officer commanding No. 3. S.F.T.S., said the plane clipped a tree top and crashed 100 yards further on. LAC. McGruther was thrown clear and suffered a fractured leg, cuts and bruises, while his companions were killed instantly.

The search parties led by Forest Ranger Wm. Shankland, of Bragg Creek, Alta., sighted the wreckage late Friday but could not reach the scene until noon Saturday. They camped there Saturday night and Sunday morning started the long trek down to civilization. At 7 p.m. they reached Bragg Creek and an hour later were in Calgary.

THROWN CLEAR

Rainstorms through the area delayed the searchers before they reached the plane and hampered the rescue of McGruther.

An R.C.A.F. investigation was opened at the scene. The plane had apparently been winging south around the mountain, when the tail plane struck the top of a tall spruce tree, tearing the tail off.

The plane crashed with terrific force 100 yards further on. Both Brown and Greenfield were killed instantly. Thrown clear, McGruther was left practically helpless with a broken leg.

Unable to get emergency rations out of the plane, McGruther tied up his leg and managed to hobble down to a creek for water several times while waiting for rescue.

Owing to the inaccessibility of the spot, R.C.A.F. officials said it was doubtful if any attempt would be made to salvage any parts of the plane.

TRAVELLED SLOWLY

The stretcher-bearers took nine hours to negotiate the 13 miles back to the ambulance. They left the wreck scene at 8 a.m. Sunday and reached the ambulance at 5 p.m. Travelling slowly over the rough foothills trail, the ambulance arrived in Bragg Creek about 8 p.m. and two and a half hours later moved into Calgary.

The rescue party overcame tremendous difficulties to reach the wreck and success came only after an R.C.A.F. plane made frequent flights over the wreckage to show the way.

The R.C.A.F. party was headed by Wing Commander Ross, and consisted of a number of R.C.A.F. men, ground crewmen, several trucks, two physicians, a first aid crew and two ambulances. Their route led 14 miles southwest of Bragg Creek.

Britain, Russia Demand Nazi Agents Leave Iran

By FREDERICK KUH

LONDON, Aug. 18. — (BUP) — Great Britain and Russia have determined to force thousands of German agents out of Iran (Persia) and the polite wording of a note they have delivered to the Iranian government is merely sugar coating to make the semi-ultimative demand more palatable, it was understood today.

The presence of some 4,000 Germans in Iran, many of them in key positions in the Iranian railroad, radio, telegraph and telephone systems, is regarded as a definite danger to both Russia and Britain.

Iran is understood to be well aware, as it is euphemistically put here, that both Britain and Russia now have strong military forces in position for action, if action is necessary, to safeguard their interests against the German danger.

MUST END MENACE

Authoritative sources made it known yesterday that Britain and Russia, through their envoys at Tehran, had requested the Iranian government to take "effective action" to end what is called a menace.

It is understood that the new representations were polished rather than blunt, due only to the desire of the British government to make them as easy as possible for Iran to accept. There seemed to be no doubt that both Russia and Britain intend that the Germans get out.

Britain and Russia want at least 80 per cent of the some 4,000 Germans sent home and they have offered to replace all German technicians whose services Iran needs.

The longer the Germans continue to attack Russia, especially along the Black Sea coast, the more important Iran's position becomes. The Iranian coast of the British and Russian view, provides a potentially dangerous base for German raids across the Caspian Sea on the Caucasus oil fields. Iran is now the only serious danger spot in the Near East.

CANNOT BE IGNORED

Britain and Russia are thoroughly dissatisfied at the lack of effect on the Iranian government of previous, milder representations. It was understood they now take the view, that while they respect Iran's independence and do not desire to occupy Iranian territory the danger of their position can no longer be ignored.

F.D.R. Will Step Up Aid To Britain

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt resumed personal command in the capital today, with all signs indicating a faster future tempo for United States efforts to hasten the downfall of the Axis.

The president continued to keep his own counsel on the broad world strategy worked out in his historic conference with Winston Churchill, and the belief was he would use deeds, not words, to disclose it when the time came.

The president started the New work week with an appointment with congressional leaders to survey the legislative situation, and it was thought likely one top item of discussion would be a new lease-lend appropriation—perhaps as high as $10,000,000,000.

SUPPLEMENT FUND

Mr. Roosevelt intimated Saturday when he landed from his ocean trip that more money would be sought soon to supplement the original $7,000,000,000 lease-lend fund voted by congress last March. Moreover, Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's minister of supply now in Washington, is stressing Britain's need for still greater help—for "More, more of everything."

Upon his return to the White House yesterday after an absence of a fortnight, the president devoted more than two hours to a review of the international situation with State Secretary Cordell Hull.

Affairs in the Far East and the closer alignment of the Vichy government with Germany were understood to be two of the subjects discussed.

Week-end developments tended particularly to keep the subject of Japan to the fore. Japan refused to permit the steamship President Coolidge to call at a Japanese port to pick up 100 U. S. nationals who wish to return home.

CLAIM "ENCIRCLEMENT"

There were Japanese complaints that the Anglo-American-Soviet front against Germany betokened "encirclement" of Japan. And the Tokyo press claimed pressure on Thailand from anti-Axis nations, with the editorial comment that "in the future we cannot treat such pressure lightly."

Although Japan's action in the President Coolidge case was considered comparatively minor, it was known the state department is studying means for removal of citizens who desire to leave Japan.

The Japanese action, however, aroused Rep. John Dingell (Democrat-Michigan) who said he would recommend that the President "order imprisonment in concentration camps in Hawaii of 10,000 alien Japanese within 48 hours after transmission of a note to the Tokyo government" if the Americans were not allowed to depart.

As for the projected Anglo-American talks with Soviet officials in Moscow, arrangements here apparently were proceeding undeterred. Mr. Churchill and the President broached the idea in a message to Joseph Stalin Saturday and the Russian leader accepted.

Japanese Put Restrictions On Foreigners

By ROBERT BELLAIRE

TOKYO, Aug. 18.—(BUP)—Embassies and legations were notified today that, effective at once, all foreigners must obtain permission from the governors of the prefectures in which they reside before they can leave Japan.

Foreign diplomatic and consular officers were ordered to report to the foreign office before attempting to leave the country "in order to avoid any misunderstanding."

The foreign office, promulgating the orders in the official gazette, said the governors were authorized to order foreigners wishing to leave the country to delay their departure or leave from designated ports.

REFUSE DISCUSSION

Both the government and the American embassy declined to discuss the incident of the American liner President Coolidge.

(The state department at Washington announced Saturday that the Japanese government had refused to permit 100 American citizens to sail for home in the liner President Coolidge, which was to have called for them on its way to the United States from Shanghai.)

It was understood that the embassy refused to discuss the incident because it might arouse American feeling against Japan. It said all announcements would come from Washington.

American Ambassador Joseph Clark Grew visited Admiral Teijoro Toyoda, foreign minister, this afternoon to discuss the President Coolidge case and other questions. The main question he sought to discuss, it was understood, was that of permission for 25 American officials to leave Japan and the question of a general evacuation of Americans.

ATTACKS CONTINUED

Newspapers continued their campaigns against the United States.

Miyako said Anglo-American plans to aid Russia by way of Vladivostok were intended to irritate Japan and constituted a "crafty scheme to check Japan's southward expansion." Japan was not concerned regarding the aid America and Britain granted Russia, the newspaper said, but would not remain silent regarding any "disturbance of the Sea of Japan."

(Supplies for Russia by way of Vladivostok must pass through the Sea of Japan.)

The War And Old Age Pensions

Discussion of the Old Age Pension law is discouraged by Ottawa on the ground that Canada is at war and should not concern herself with anything but the war effort.

It is our respectful submission that the Old Age Pension law is very much relevant to the war effort and should be immediately amended for that reason if not for those reasons of decency and civilization which have apparently failed to move our legislators.

Everybody knows and admits that the Old Age Pensions are hideously out of line with common sense and reality.

In the first place, the minimum age limit of 70 is absurd.

Rightly or wrongly, the tendency is to retire people from work at a much earlier age than hitherto. Few firms will hire a man or woman over forty. None will hire a person over 60.

A pension payable at 70 is a ridiculous affair because if a man can master the art of overcoming starvation between 60 and 70, he probably can carry on to the end of his days.

The maximum sum, too, is preposterous. It never goes over $20 a month. And if a pensioner, by hook or by crook, gets more than $365 a year to live on, that excess sum is deducted from his or her pension.

It means, of course, that if some aged person, by diligence and industry, does odd jobs to pick up a few dollars or gets a gift from some well-disposed friend, he or she must either lie about the incident or be penalized for the industry or the luck.

The age limit is absurd; the sum is absurd; the restrictions are absurd.

Is there anyone think for one moment that this totally inadequate law is not taken into consideration by long-headed young men who sit down to weigh the sacrifices entailed in joining the Canadian army?

If we ask young men to fight for us, the least we can do is offer them some security for the remote future.

The Old Age Pensions law has a direct bearing on recruiting and on the war effort. It should be amended as part of the war program.

Looking Ahead

Canadians have been assured again that a special committee of the federal cabinet is still working out plans for the demobilization and civil re-establishment of men of our fighting forces when the war ends.

This is very welcome news. While no statement has been made as to what these plans are or are likely to be, it may be assumed they will be based upon the unfortunate experience which followed the unplanned disbandment of our forces when the former great war came to an end.

There is even more need for thought and advance-planning now than there was twenty years ago. For while the number of men in our forces is less than at the close of the last war, it may be even greater by the time the present one is over. Another complicating factor is that a vast proportion of the men now called into service are given special training in the handling of machinery, and the end of the war will find them adapted to work of this kind rather than to any other. What, for example, is to become of the many thousands of airmen who will be qualified to fly—and a large percentage of them not qualified to do any other sort of work—when demobilization time comes?

It is easy to say preparation should be made ahead of time to absorb the soldiers and sailors and airmen back into civilian life with the minimum loss of time and the least possible disturbance of conditions. But to draw plans by which this can and will actually be accomplished is by no means a simple task. It is however a job that has to be done. It is good news that early in the war this fact was recognized and a committee of ministers set up to start the study of the problem and the framing of policies to deal with it.

The committee, it is to be supposed and hoped, will seek advice and information from men in all ranks and classes, inside the fighting forces and out. It is a subject upon which too much informed opinion cannot be brought to bear. And it is the most important that will face the country when peace returns.

Newfoundland

The proposal has been revived in Ottawa and Toronto to formally invite Newfoundland, through the proper official channels, to join the Dominion of Canada.

Most Canadians would approve, and none object, if the invitation made clear that no attempt was being made to force the issue and take advantage of the position in which the oldest of the colonies finds itself.

Years before the war began Newfoundland finances became so badly involved that a Commission was put in charge, on the supposition that non-political management might effect economies and so restore equilibrium. The outcome did not justify the hope, and brought new troubles in the shape of popular complaints that the administrators imposed their economy policy with scant regard to the unemployed. So far as known the bond-holders fared little better under the Commission, and the public worse, than under parliamentary government.

There has never been much enthusiasm in Canada for the idea of including Newfoundland in the Dominion, because that involved the certainty of heavy expenditures from the federal treasury without a promise of corresponding revenues. The war, however, has shown that for defence purposes Newfoundland has to be considered part of Canada, and Canadian taxpayers and troops have to protect it. Separation does not, at least in wartime, free us of the obligation to take care of the colony.

Newfoundlanders have always been cool toward the proposition of union, sometimes definitely cold. The world, however, has changed in the last two years, and their sense of dependence upon Canada for defence may have inclined them to a more favorable view of the question of amalgamation. In any case the first and the final word must rest with them, and any representations made on behalf of the Dominion should make clear that we do not want to annex the island in order to exploit it. In point of fact there is little or no chance there for profitable exploitation, but the Newfoundlanders have in the past seemed to think there was.

Golf Balls Scarce

LEEDS YORKSHIRE POST

A new significance is likely to be given to a hoary golf story in the near future. It was said that when one ancient Scot tried to inveigle another into a game his friend agreed and said, "Aye, weel, get awa' oot into yon whins and find twa wee ba's!"

The time is coming when golfers may at least have to turn out their lockers and ransack drawers at home to find an old ball or two before they can enjoy a round of golf.

Manufacture of golf balls for the home market has been reduced to 10 per cent of normal output, and while the amount of golf that can be played is probably less than half that of peace-time, appeals are being made to all club members to turn out the lumber in their lockers and help the professional to find old balls which can be recovered and repainted.

Are We Concerning Ourselves Most With Vanity Or Victory?

Personal Titivation Runs Away With Huge Sums in North America Each Year

By HAROLD L. WEIR

From all reports the continent some stories of wild scrambles to secure the dwindling stocks of silk stockings left in the stores.

Some women, we are told, have bought as many as five hundred pairs and packed them away, like precious jewels, in cellophane and fruit jars.

We hear of fist fights before the bargain counters of some of the larger cities. Several shops in the East have had to admit frantic customers by three or fours so they won't destroy the goods by pushing them from each other.

In short, the report that silk hosiery will soon be off the market has created something like a feminine panic. Consternation reigns at every tea table. Perturbation could not be greater if the order had gone forth that each woman was to lose an arm or a leg.

An observer from another planet, looking into the undisciplined hearts of our younger—and older—females, would conclude that silk stockings, on this quaint earth, were a badge of high achievement or, at least, of noble birth.

Harold L. Weir

Silk Hose Help

Now one would have to be an unaesthetic clod to deny that the silk stocking is a valuable article of titivation.

Under certain circumstances, it lends an element of allure. Its delicate sheen adds to that mystery wherewith the female of the species has been wont to enhance her person ever since the somewhat restricted days of Mother Eve.

From a practical standpoint, if a young —or old—lady does not possess that fine texture of lean which presumably the Almighty intended her to have, the silk stocking affords an attractive substitute. If she has not the curves demanded by connoisseurs of il forma divina, the silk stocking creates an illusion of shapeliness.

Thus, the greedy dieter can stuff her young self with fats and sugars, and whether the result is blotches or beef, the silk stocking helps her to get away with it.

It is reasonable then, in a way, that the exodus of this dainty garment should cause some casual heartburning.

But that it should be the source of a vast international gripe is beyond the understanding of what we jokingly call the sterner sex.

A Recent Passion

This desperate devotion to the silken shank is all the less understandable because silk hosiery is a comparative innovation in the world of feminine frippery.

As little as 150 years ago, and less, silk stockings were forbidden by law to hot polite feet.

In the court of Louis XVI (who lost his head for another reason), only the king and queen could wear silk. Even the nobles had to be content with satin.

If the young lady of 1941 thinks that silk stockings are essential to romance, what does she believe was going on during all those centuries prior to her advent in this vale of tears?

Did Cleopatra work through remote control?

Or was Circe's charm exercised through a matrimonial bureau?

Yet neither of these ladies ever heard of a silk stocking.

Helen of Troy did pretty well for herself, too. She exhausted Greece and razed Troy wholly in her bare knees. Just think of that, you dames who are jostling each other at stocking counters in the frenzied belief that cotton is fatal to the calves.

All this desperation is particularly silly on a continent that was populated, just a few generations ago, by sturdy women shod in homespun and with millers' symbols across the gluteus maximus.

And believe it or not, girls, they had their moments too.

Adornment

History tells us that the human animal has always possessed a passion for colorful adornment. The most ancient graves yield up cosmetic pots and false hair. The long-dead Egyptian beauty also loved to get herself up like Mrs. Astor's plush horse.

Nor was the weakness entirely feminine. Other savages in remote parts of the world indulge in face paint and hair grease.

Our own male ancestors did it.

In the year 30 B.C., no British gentleman would think of going out to make a night of it without having his face pinked out in blobs of blue woad.

But this generation differs from all others because never before has femininity been so horribly and pitifully in earnest about it.

Adornment used to be casual. Now it is a cankerous passion.

The adult females of fashion would sooner be caught blushing in the raw than without her rouge and eyebrow pencil. She feels more naked without her eye shadow than without her dress.

That is why pandemonium is let loose with a treble shriek when North America learns that silk stockings are to go the way of all vanities.

The adult females believe that such fripperies indicate sophistication, forgetting that sophistication is only a mask to hide the physiognomic vacuity of ignorance.

The adolescent females, down to the ten-year-olds, have to be constantly watched by intelligent mothers lest they they must appear in processed hair gory succumb to the passionate conviction that fingernails and the enamelled languor of a jaded and disillusioned "woman of the world."

It would be nice to see a little girl again.

Vanity or Victory

I love the ladies. Bedizened or bedangled, they are lovely creatures. They are sympathetic, artistic and mostly intelligent.

That is why it is such a shame they have gone off on this ludicrous tangent about vanity and appearance, in the fatuous notion that the stars will halt in their courses if their bedeckment falls below par.

That is why it is so unfortunate that, in these days of essential economy, they should continue to pour out millions of dollars on new shades of nail paint, that most hideous and inartistic of all boudoir obsessions.

That is why it is a pity they should continue, in these stressful times, to subscribe to the flimsy hokum of cosmeticians, who sell lipstick at $1.50 which could not possibly cost more than a twentieth of a cent, who continually put new and costly face creams on the market when there are only three basic face cream formulas in the world and all the rest are inconsequential variations of them.

There might be such a thing as victory with vanity, but I doubt it. We can't afford both. Scrapping our lipstick and powder we have to get down to essentials in this war and delve below the surface of things, might I respectfully and sympathetically suggest that this delving begin before the dressing tables of the women who are howling to high heaven because the silk stocking is going out?

Knowledge Of Knots Useful

Who Can Lift the Weights?—Thoughts on Minding One's Business

By J. S. COWPER

I don't know if the unsettled news from Russia and Japan is to blame, but two domestic incidents got on my nerves in the past week.

I was spanking the typewriter keys one morning when I heard sounds of violent quarrelling next door. A woman in shrill tones was giving better than she got in the verbal exchanges, as is customary. The brute who was on the receiving end seemingly lost his temper, for there came the sound of blows and a woman's scream.

Making my private quarrels a dangerous business, but I couldn't stand scorning a woman beaten. The door was open, but before I got there I saw my neighbor calmly reading a newspaper while the radio was bleating out blue murder from a soap opera. You'd think there's trouble enough in the world without the soap makers adding imaginary woes.

Couple of days ago, bringing a workboat round for a week-end friend, a condenser in the distributor burned out and I was left tossing on the briny deep till a fisherman towed me in to a fish float. There were a lot of things in the open hold, tools, gear and camp equipment worth stealing. Today when I rowed out to make repairs I saw some chap stealthily paddling to the boat at anchor. He sheered off when I waved, and I thought I was just in time to prevent pillage.

Twice afterwards when I looked out, he was still watching his chance. A few minutes later while I was immersed in the job I heard his boat bump against ours. Next thing something came flying past my head. It was a copy of the Gospel according to Saint John, with tracts enclosed. The suspect was evidently a missioner on the lookout for fishermen. I think I'd been using some fisherman's language on the engine.

Learning the Ropes

On the 40-mile run across the gulf, as the sea seemed threatening, I had rigged a block and tackle and with the help of a landsman passenger, hauled a heavy skiff on board, lest we lose it. Just at the critical time when I wanted to drop the boat on deck before she swung wide, I found that the passenger had wound about ten feet of the end of the tackle rope two cleats and the mast, and had finished the job with three grannie's knots. That was another time I used approved language. One bend of the rope with a Blackwall hitch would have secured it and come free.

If you want to spend an interesting and profitable winter's evening, get a book on knots and with a couple of short ends of rope or cord, learn some of the safe and easy knots, bends and hitches that the old sailors had in their bag of tricks. They'll surprise you with their strength and simplicity and may stand you in good stead in emergency.

A Blackwall hitch is just a twist of the rope round a hook or cleat so that the part that takes the weight binds the loose end. The harder the pull the tighter it binds—the principle of all good knots and hitches.

If you never learn another knot, learn to tie a bowline, the King of all knots, and the one with the greatest number of uses. It's hard to explain a knot without a drawing. The best I can do in letterpress is this: Take the loose end of the rope and make a small loop in it a couple of feet or so from the end. Through this loop pass the end of the rope, putting it round the standing part of the rope and back again through the loop. You've got a large loop then at the end of the rope that can't slip and that won't pull tight. This knot is useful where you want to take a rope on an eye in a rope. It's handy for hoisting men and materials in construction work.

A Belt Goes Begging

With the aid of a good block and tackle I might have made a fortune by selling diamond-studded gold and silver belt that the executors of the estate of the late Warren Lincoln Lewis are authorized to hand over to anyone who can duplicate the feats which won for Travis in 1906 the belt as title of the world's greatest weight lifter.

This is all you have to do, within the space of thirty minutes:

"1—100-pound dumb bell brought from floor, pressed over head, both hands, while sitting. Ten times in thirty seconds.

"2—Pair of ninety-pound weights brought from floor to body to shoulders, then slowly pressing to arms' lengths over the head.

"3—Teeth lift from floor, hands behind back, 350 pounds.

"4—350 pounds from floor with one finger, eight times in five seconds.

"5—One-finger lift from floor, 560 pounds once.

"6—Two-hand grip lift straddling the weight, from floor, 700 pounds, twenty times in ten seconds.

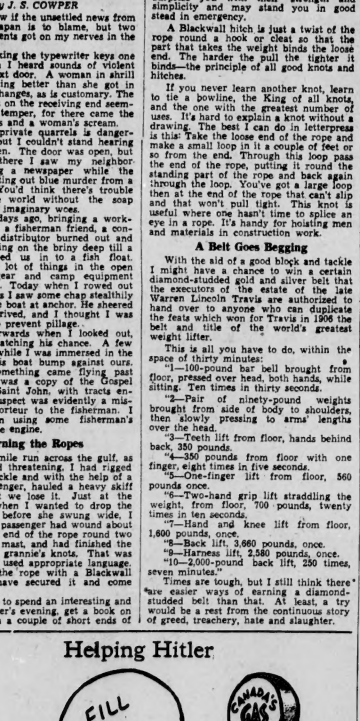

"7—Hand and knee lift from floor, 1,600 pounds once.

"8—Back lift, 3,660 pounds, once.

"9—Harness lift, 2,580 pounds, once.

"10—2,000-pound back lift, 230 times, seven minutes."

Times are tough, but I still think there are easier ways of making a diamond-studded belt than that. At least, a try would be a rest from the continuous story of greed, treachery, hate and slaughter.

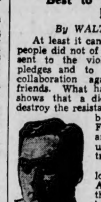

Vichy All-Out For Hitler

Darlan and Petain Will Do Their Best to Hasten British Defeat

By WALTER LIPPMANN

At least it can be said that the French people did not of their own free will consent to the collapse of their solemn pledges and to the black treachery of collaboration against their allies and friends. What happened in France shows that a dictatorship is needed to destroy the resistance of the French nation before the resources of France—her ships, ports and fighting men, can be used for this gigantic betrayal.

W. Lippmann

There is now no longer any doubt that in Admiral Darlan, who is through him and behind him, a dictatorship has been set up for the purpose of compelling France to fight for Hitler. There may be a faint shred left as to whether Admiral Darlan can effectively crush resistance in France; there may be a slightly stronger chance that he can dictate with entire effectiveness in North Africa. But there is no doubt that Darlan and the men with him have to try and that, behind the curtain of censorship, increasingly ruthless methods will be employed to break the spirit of the French people.

Nobody Fooled

Assurances, explanations and sentimental appeals, whether they come from Marshal Petain, the French Ambassador in Washington or from spokesmen in Vichy, can deceive no one. If Vichy does not surrender the fleet and the African ports and join the Axis as an active belligerent, it will be only because the Darlan dictatorship has not yet purged, imprisoned or otherwise liquidated the Frenchmen who are opposed to the great betrayal. It will be only time for a dictatorship to overcome all resistance: Mussolini needed several years and Hitler more than that.

Darlan, too, may need a little time. But no one can any longer indulge in doubt that, backed by the whole power of Nazi Germany, the Darlan dictatorship will now move as rapidly as French resistance can be overcome toward active participation in the war.

New War Front

Thus the die is cast, and Vichy, which has already opened the gates of Indo-China to Japan, will now use all its powers of compulsion, corruption and seduction to open the gates of North Africa to Hitler. Vichy, which swore to high heaven it would defend the French empire, has in fact used its Asiatic empire to let the triple Axis create a new war front in the Pacific. It will now use its African empire to let the Nazis create a new war front in the South Atlantic.

We see, then, that the strategic map has been the optimism which has looked upon the Russian campaign as putting an end to Hitler's power to threaten Britain and the United States. It is true that Hitler's attack on Russia has opened up a new fighting front against Germany. But Hitler, who is no fool, has in reply undertaken to open up at least two and perhaps three fighting fronts against the democracies. Using Japan and Vichy France in the Far East he has opened up a new front in the South Pacific which threatens gravely the Philippines, Singapore, Australia, the Netherlands Indies and the supply lines of China. Using Vichy France, and in some measure Spain, he is preparing to open up a new front which threatens the whole connection between South America, North America and the British Isles. Finally, there is a strong prospect that he will induce the Japanese to open up a third front in Siberia, threatening gravely threatening Alaska and the sea routes of the Northern Pacific. If he can break through the Russian resistance and establish physical contact with Japan through Siberia, all the four corners of our world position will then be under fire.

The Free World

The free world today extends north and south from Alaska to the Argentine, and from the British Isles in the northeast through North America to Australia, the Indies, and China in the southwest. Were the Nazi-Japanese combination to occupy Siberia in the northwest, Singapore in the southwest, the British Isles in the northeast and West Africa and the Atlantic islands in the southeast, we should stand entirely encircled and completely isolated. We should be subject to blockade, raids, and surprise attack in both oceans and from all directions. The conquest of Russia and the occupation of Siberia, the final French capitulation in Africa, are now in sight: the Russians may be able to resist. General Weygand or some one else may be able to refuse to hold to his solemn pledges and to the black treachery of collaboration against their allies and friends. What is happened in France shows that a dictatorship is needed to destroy the resistance of the French nation before the resources of France—her ships, ports and fighting men, can be used for this gigantic betrayal.

Wheat Yields

Editor, Bulletin: In the course of one of your "Looking Backward" editorial paragraphs (1911—30 years ago) I see this: "The prairie provinces have a crop this year from which it is expected they will thresh 200,000,000 bushels of wheat."

Today's prospective 1941 breadgrain yield from those same "prairie provinces" is, according to various press reports, estimated at somewhat around 285,000,000 bushels.

As one of your readers who had some relation to both of those yields, I find it very curious to note the turn of the wheel, almost full-circle, in terms of the breadgrain yield from those western fields.

Some of the obvious contrasts, would centre around the fact that the 1911 outturn was the first time the expanding West had hit the second "century" in millions of bushels of wheat; whereas the 1941 estimate wins no tinge of the old enthusiasm—unless, perhaps, on Parliament Hill, as a result of having 490,000,000 bushels of so-called "surplus wheat" already in the bin.

From the farm viewpoint, of course, there would also be the contrast in the price-level, namely, 80 cents for the average bushel of wheat from in 1911, as against 51 cents today. This, in modern parlance, is "not so hot", from the angle of the 1941 grower! Three hundred bushels bought my 1912 binder, while twice as many bushels are needed in 1941.

Anyway, Mr. Editor, I have just come across these great fields of "the prairie provinces" once again, and thought back over the passing years between 1911-1941. True, we have had our ups and downs, enthusiasms and disappointments, sunshine and shadow; but we have come through. Even today, though somewhat tarnished, I still see this favored land as "The Golden West." It is all in the viewpoint. One of my friends recently closed a letter on this note: "As the sun goes down on an embattled world, there appears on the horizon the world, 'Retribution!'"

But maybe the sun is coming up on a chastened and wiser world, with the golden word "Co-operation" on the horizon?

Largest Handling Of Livestock Is Reported For Year

The largest handling of livestock in the history of the association, was the announcement made to the members of the Grande Prairie Co-operative Livestock Marketing Association regarding the past year's activities, at the annual meeting held here recently. The manager recommended that a dividend be paid to shippers at the rate of 15 cents per cwt. dressed weight for hogs and 5 cents per cwt. live weight on cattle.

A further cut in handling charges was possible if the volume of stock handled increased in proportion, it was shown at the meeting. Stock is now being sold through the Alberta Livestock Co-operative.

Men Leave For Harvest Work

Twenty men left Grouard this week for harvest jobs between Grimshaw and Fairview. It has been rumored that harvest help would be scarce in the north Peace River area, but it appears that enough men will be available. Men may be scarce for threshing requirements. Wages set by farmers throughout the north Peace River districts are $3 for ordinary help per day and $4 per day for threshing.

Showers of rain have hampered cutting operations. The only grain crops not laying down near Fairview is that owned by Sam Spofford who farms a few miles northwest of here.

In the army six months, L.-Cpl. W. E. Fraser, stationed at Petawawa camp, Ont., with the R.C.E., arrived here Friday on furlough. His home is at historical Dunvegan and he joined the forces at Grande Prairie while training there.

Airport Buildings Under Construction

Construction of buildings for the Grande Prairie airport, which will cost about $50,000, is now under way. These will include an airways building for the control room, meteorological department, pilots' quarters and furnace room, four staff residences, three for married men and one for single; a transmitter building, and a large garage.

All the buildings will be air-conditioned, supplied with water and sewer, electric light and be modern in all respects. The residences will have full basements. The building program is to be completed this fall, and work will be rushed with first class laborers only. The contract has been let to a local firm.

Other improvements at the airport include enlarged parking space and gravel walks and a chain fence to keep people away from the machines during fueling and transferring of passengers and baggage. Gravel is being hauled for the runways by a "24-hour" procession of trucks.

Northern Doctors Hold Convention

Members of the Peace River Medical Association met here last week for their annual convention. Besides local and district members, the convention had a group of specialists from Edmonton, who arrived by plane for the meeting. These included Dr. Gow Harrison, secretary of the Alberta Medical Association; Dr. Vant, president-elect of the provincial association; Dr. Fyfe, department of surgery, University hospital; Dr. Calder, child specialist.

Following the convention, the visitors were entertained at the Richmond Hill golf and country club, and later at a dinner at the Palace cafe.

These annual conventions have usually been held at the old historic spot of Dunvegan on the Peace river, but due to the absence of several doctors north of the Peace, this year's meeting was held at Grande Prairie.

Public School Garden Draws Tourists' Praise For Its Variety

A garden here that is attracting a great deal of interest from tourists, as well as favorable comment from such authorities as Mr. Robinson, of the department of horticulture, University of Saskatchewan, W. E. Lake, of Calgary, formerly of the staff of the department of extension, of the University of Saskatchewan, is the Lloydminster public school garden where many American tourists have claimed to have found varieties of flowers which they have never seen before.

The result of a number of years of planning, the garden is really a series of vistas created by artistic curves, with capes and bays to accentuate the affect of long stretches of green grass. It is planted in sections containing the kindred species: Asiatic plants, European plants, fruits, creeping varieties, Asiatic evergreens, North American evergreens, native and North American trees and shrubs, and hardy hybrid trees and shrubs. In addition the numerous plots of annuals and perennials which are planted about the grounds present a brilliant display of color.

For the convenience of nature lovers a bulletin board will be erected with a master plan of the garden, the sections will be suitably marked with signboards which have been made in the school, and the different species of flowers will be individually staked.

Public interest in the corner of the Meridian and the Jasper highway, the garden serves as a tourist attraction as well as a suitable surrounding for the war memorial, public park, and an outdoor laboratory for horticulturists.

The garden's development has been planned over a period of years and the resident superintendent of schools for this district, the principal, W. H. Mitchell, chairman of the grounds committee, and the local public school board are to be congratulated and highly complimented on their wisdom and foresight in developing such a fine asset for the school and the town.

Dominion's War Effort Is Told French People

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—(CP)—Three representatives of French Canada Sunday sent messages of comfort and news of the dominion's war effort to the peoples of occupied and unoccupied France through facilities of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Boston station WRUL.

They were Maj.-Gen L. R. LaFleche, deputy minister of national war services; L. de Montigny, director of the senate translation services; and Mme. Marthe Simard, wife of Prof. Andre Simard of Laval University, Quebec.

READY FOR SACRIFICE

Gen. LaFleche, who at first hand saw France crumble before the German advance, recalled to the people of France ties of affection, blood and common ideals which unite them with Canada and which are forever evident at Vimy Ridge "where 60,000 Canadians sleep at the side of their French comrades in the soil of France."

Canadians were ready to accept any and all sacrifices in order to destroy Hitlerism. Not only were French-Canadians proud to be defending Canada and Britain "but they also are ready to accept all sacrifices in order to liberate our former motherland."

Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve, said Gen. LaFleche, was called "the Cardinal of Victory" in Quebec and under his leadership Quebec French-Canadians were fighting for eternal spiritual values and virtues inherited from their ancestors.

"For these they will fight to the end," the general declared.

He called upon the French people to resist by every means possible the domination of the Nazis.

WHEAT FOR PEOPLE

Dr. Cardinal told how French-Canadians were at work in factories, in mines, in woods, on the land; how their money was flowing into every phase of the war effort and how the men of French Canada were joining the forces as soldiers, sailors, airmen and technicians.

"We must not indicate to you how many hundreds of millions of bushels of grain which are produced in the Canadian west will be reserved for you, but you will receive it the moment there is a certainty it will not reach your enemies and ours and be used to nourish your populations."

Mme. Simard, herself French and with all her relatives living in France, described success of recruiting French-Canadians for active service in Quebec, and the exploits of the Free French forces.

"Canadians have every confidence in you," she told her countrymen. "Thanks to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, his sailors, soldiers and aviators, France and Frenchmen are still respected in the world."

No Opposition Motor Boat Race

RED BANK, N.J. Aug. 18.—(AP) —The deals spell of the gold cup motorboat racing apparently was sounded Saturday when Zaimon G. Simmons, of Greenwich, Conn., won the classic speed trophy with the second "walkover" in the history of gold cup competition.

After all other entries had dropped out, Simmons drove his craft, My Sin, over the course at an average speed of 58.5 miles per hour to capture the gold-plated, sterling silver cup which for many years was the most coveted trophy of motorboat racing. That surpassed last year's winning speed.

Simmons said: "There's no fun in going out there by yourself."

The only previous walkover in gold cup history came in 1936 when Baye Gordon drove Horace Dodge's Impahi around the course alone.

Ferry Flier Gave Up Seat In Plane To Arthur Purvis

MONTREAL, Aug. 18. — (CP) — Don Teel, 35-year-old owner of the Odessa, Tex., airport and a transAtlantic ferry pilot, gave up his seat on the ill-fated transport plane which crashed in the United Kingdom Thursday, it was disclosed Sunday, so that Rt. Hon. Arthur B. Purvis, one of the 22 men killed, could return to Washington.

Teel's name was contained in the first casualty list of the accident received here by the ferry command of the Royal Air Force, but was deleted in a revised list which arrived before publication of the original one.

According to reliable sources here Mr. Purvis, director of the British Purchasing Commission in the United States, had gone to England to confer with Lord Beaverbrook, minister of supply. When he learned that Lord Beaverbrook was already on this side of the Atlantic, Mr. Purvis decided to double back. The returning plane was loaded to capacity, but Teel offered to give up his seat.

Meetings Held Close To Land Picture Shows

LONDON, Aug. 18—(CP)—A British film of the Roosevelt-Churchill talks shows at least one of their meetings was held close to land.

Rocky coastline is shown in the background as Prime Minister Churchill is leaning over the rail of the British battleship Prince of Wales and watching a departing United States destroyer carrying President Roosevelt.

The film was flown to Britain in a bomber from the scene of the meeting.

VISITED CHURCHILL

It was disclosed President Roosevelt visited the British battleship only once, last Sunday. He arrived in a United States destroyer, attended church service, was entertained at luncheon and later inspected the ship.

When the president was leaving, a gangway was flung across from the Prince of Wales to the destroyer. Then there was what the London Daily Mirror called "a happy incident." The battleship's cat—as black as ebony—sauntered on to the gangway, paused in the middle and purred while the president side-stepped by.

For another meeting Mr. Churchill flew to Placentia Bay, where in a bay quite close to shore.

MESSAGE FROM KING

The Prime Minister's first act was to give the President a message from King George VI, as follows:

"I have the honor, Mr. President, to hand you a letter from His Majesty the King."

Then they lunched together on board and for a greater part of the time they were alone while their staffs met and got down to business in separate conference. Mr. Churchill stayed aboard for dinner that night.

Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Supply, also was seen in the movie pacing the decks with Mr. Churchill, the United States lend-lease administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, and members of their staffs.

Companions Give Wedding Present To Alberta Flier

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 18.—(CP)—Graduates at a wings presentation ceremony at No. 1 Bombing and Gunnery School at Jarvis were a proud lot on Saturday, but the proudest of all was A. J. Limoges, whose home is in Peace River, Alta.

Shortly after he received his air gunner's wing, a fellow-classman stepped up to him and gave him a gift.

"It's from the fellows, with best wishes," said the classman, a New Zealander.

"Thanks, and that's all I can say," Limoges managed to blurt out.

Following the presentation Limoges planned to head west on his leave and get married. The $20 was for a wedding gift from his classmates.

Pact Indicates London, Moscow Mean Business

By HAROLD FAIR

LONDON, Aug. 18—(CP)—A new era in Anglo-Soviet relations was opened Sunday with the signing of a barter agreement supplemented by a British credit of at least £10,000,000 (about $45,000,000) a move described by informed sources that "Britain and Russia mean business."

Announcement of the agreement came after it had been predicted that prompt arrangements would be made for a Moscow conference on raw materials resulting from Premier Joseph Stalin's acceptance of the Churchill-Roosevelt proposals for such a parley.

Latest unofficial reports say that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Lord Beaverbrook will lead the British delegation.

It is indicated here that the conference will be wide in range. Russia will need replenishment in aircraft, tanks and certain raw materials.

Additional evidence of Anglo-Russian "collaboration" came with yesterday's report of a new move by Moscow and London to induce Iran to get rid of German "tourists" now in that eastern kingdom.

"You can take it as absolutely definite that the British cannot tolerate the possibility of a fifth column growing up in Iran, one source commented.

It was explained that Britain was in no position to curb previous Nazi infiltration into Bulgaria and Rumania, but in Iran both Moscow and London have the means to halt its development.

There are about 3,000 Germans in Iran, "completely classified as tourists, and others employed in the railway and telegraph systems—vital points should the Nazis attempt a coup. There is no immediate danger, this source said, but Britain wants to be certain it will not be confronted in Iran next spring with the same situation as last spring's Nazi-inspired revolt in Iraq.

Nazis Have Little To Be Happy About

LONDON, Aug. 18—(CP)—Frank Owen, editor of the London Evening Standard, said Sunday night Russia will fight more and war with Germany and Allied soldiers will join hands with Russian soldiers—"Germany shall not stand in the way."

Mr. Owen was speaking on the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Britain Speaks" feature.

"Make no mistake: Russia will triumph. Make no mistake: Russia is fully prepared for war," he said. "Russians have sacrificed to provide for mighty war machine and this is a war of machines."

"Russians: It will be done as Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt promised. Allied soldiers will follow Allied arms to join hands with the Russian soldiers. Germany shall not stand in the way."

Mr. Owen said that "if I were a German I would not be very happy tonight.

"If I were a German civilian I would be thinking of another hard week of toil which lies ahead, and if I were a German soldier I would be thinking of facing death for my Nazi overlords," he continued.

"If I were a German I would realize the Germans has been stopped on the eastern front by the Russians; and I would be turning my eyes to the west and thinking of the meeting of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt on the Atlantic ocean.

"If I were a German I would wonder why these two great men were permitted to hold a meeting on what Dr. Goebels (German Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels) has termed 'a German lake.' I would wonder why sea and less German submarines are being seen in the Atlantic and why British shipping losses are down."

Whirlaway Thriving On Hard Work

By SID FEDER

SARATOGA SPRINGS., N.Y., Aug. 18.—(AP)—They can say what they will about Whirlaway's wacky ways, but they can't laugh the screwy skyrocket off the list of all-time racing greats any longer, particularly because of his simple diet of overwork.

Great race horses come along about as often as Babe Ruths, but Whirly has proved his right to a spot in the select set, largely by the way he is handling one of the toughest campaigns ever mapped out for a three-year-old. Just how long it can last, there's no way of telling.

FIRST TO DO IT

Counting his remarkable run to take the Travers Stakes Saturday in the mud—thereby becoming the first triple crown winner to add the oldest stake in the United States to the big three—Whirly has been to the races an average of once every 12 days since he started his three-year-old running.

Saturday's was his 16th outing of the year. The record-book listings of all-time greats show only two among the upper crust—Seabiscuit and Sun Beau—who went to the post more than that as three-year-olds.

WHY NOT RUN HIM?

"So what?" Trainer Ben Jones challenged today. "Whirly's sound so there's no reason not to run him. After studying him for two years, I'm convinced he needs racing, lots of it."

He takes off again today and heads for Chicago, where he will go for the $40,000 American Derby at Washington Park next Saturday.

The Travers, in which he spotted two other three-year-olds 18 pounds and a dozen lengths in the first mile, and then whizzed past them, was his 11th victory in his 16 outings this year.

The $18,900 he picked up for toe muddy mile and a quarter brought his earnings to $275,636, thereby boosting him past War Admiral to No. 12 on the all-time money winning list.

The bettors knocked Whirly down to $2.30 for $2.

Looking them Over

By JACK KELLY

CHAMPIONSHIP honors have slipped away again from Ponoka in the one sport that this town really takes seriously—baseball. When the Dodgers edged out that 4-3 victory over the Stampeders in 10 innings here Sunday afternoon, Ponoka was all washed up for another season.

The stalwart fans down there—yes and most of the players, too—have one consolation, however. They can now get on with their harvesting without having to stop early and rush to town or Edmonton for a playoff game.

While Edmontonians are naturally satisfied to see their own two clubs battling in the championship series, the majority of them feel sorry for the disappointed fans in Ponoka. The Stampeder supporters have hope when it comes to getting behind their team, travelling with them and boosting for them.

What is more, Ponoka has been the corner stone that has made senior ball possible here for several years. Hit hard by retirements, injuries and war enlistments, Ponoka fielded another fine club this season by dent of scouting the country high and low for talent.

The championship series has been made a best of seven affair, with the first game at Renfrew Park at 6:00 p.m. Thursday. Starting time has been made a half-hour earlier on account of the shortening days. The second game will be on Sunday afternoon.

If the public is right, then the Dodgers have the championship of the league. Take a poll of opinion almost anywhere, except in the Arrows' dressing room, and the majority of fans figure Ralph Morgan and his men will be champions of the Central Alberta League for the second straight year.

Fans can settle down though for a spell of bitter battles. Arrows and Dodgers are too closely matched in pitching and hitting power for either to make a sweep of the series. There'll be some rousing engagements down at Renfrew before the champions are named.

There's Fish In Them Thar Lakes

HOW would you like to get battling five-pound Rainbows on a fly rod? Yeah, I had just about given up hope, too, but A. J. "Red" Hopps tells me that you can really get these babies on the upper and lower Kananaskis lakes now—and get them on flies, not trolls. You can also get Cut-throats and hybrids that are a cross between Cut-throats and Rainbow.

Red tossed a fly out 40 feet recently at Kananaskis and one of these hybrids hit it and raced out 75 yards, breaking water and trying to shake the hook loose.

These lakes are very high—up around 5,500 feet above sea level and fed by a glacier. They are as cold as ice and the fish in them are hard as rocks and full of fight. Red has had most success with flies of his own tying that resemble a Jock Scott.

It is now possible to get right in to these lakes with a car—if the weather is dry. You leave the Calgary-Banff highway about 60 miles west of Calgary and swing south and west to near the British Columbia border. The road is just roughly graded out, but if your car is not too long and not too low you can make it all right.

However fair warning must go with this tip on a fisherman's paradise. You've got to know fly fishing to get them that way. It's a fine art and not to be confused with casting or trolling. These big trout are there, but they don't jump out of the water in a frenzy to get at a fly before you can tie it on your leader.

Incidentally, you folks down in the Calgary and Banff areas might note that up here we are not ring to suppress news of the fishing and tourist attractions you have. Why not snap out of it and let the name "Jasper Park" slip off your tongues once in awhile? There is some mighty fine fishing up that way too.

Trim Ponoka 4-3 Final Loop Game

Dodgers edged out Ponoka 4-3 in the tenth inning of the last of the regular games of Central Alberta Baseball League at Renfrew Park on Sunday afternoon and as a result wind up the schedule in first place with Arrows next. A win for the Stamps would have tied all three teams.

Manager Ralph Morgan was doing the chucking and although he was in difficulties a few times in the early innings, partly through rather shaky support, he seemed to get stronger as usual as the game progressed and only yielded eight hits, while his team was collecting 13.

Chief Jimmy Rattlesnake for the Stampeders looked particularly good until he struck the eighth inning when the Dodgers got to him for four hits and pair of runs to tie up the score. He struck out three in the ninth although Harold Homan speared a hit.

STEWART STARTS IT

The Chief was in trouble right from the start of the 10th, as Doug Stewart, first man up, tagged him for a single and Ken McAuley followed with another.

Virgil Nels then went in as relief and Cliff Kilburn was safe when Virgil threw a trifle wide to first on an attempted sacrifice. With the bases full Morgan drove one between the Ponoka shortstop's legs for what looked like an easy out, but the ball wound up in the outfield and the game was over.

The Stampeders took a one-run lead in the initial frame, Palechek opened up with a Texas leaguer into left field and stole second.

Roy Bonham then tagged one for what really looked like a homer, but Dave Brockie leaped in the air to pull it down after a hard run, Palechek taking third on the throw-in. Al Chapman grounded out to first, but brother Frank came through and the run was in.

SCORE IS TIED

The Dodgers came right back and tied up the count, Ralph Morgan connecting solidly for a single into centre. He was to second on a passed ball and to third on Williams' out. He came home when Brockie was safe on fielder's choice.

Ponoka regained the lead in the third, Frank Chapman doubling after two were down and he made the rest of the journey on an error at third and one at first in when Latiff was safe.

The Stamps went two up in the first of the eighth, Latiff really leaned on one which was good for three bases, but an overthrow by second on the relay from the right fielder allowed Latiff to keep right on travelling.

Tommy Brant made a great catch of Whitney's drive in the 10th. It retired the side and there were three on bases at the time.

It was Ken McAuley's double in the eighth, following hits by Brant and Stewart that tied up the game and sent it into over-time Kilburn Next lowest scorer was M. J. Boucher with 78.

Forty members took part in the competition, the first round must be played in all flights before Sunday which is set aside for the second round.

Veteran Aussie Jockey Starves Self To Death

By D. E. BURRITT

SALISBURY, England, Aug. 18—(CP)—Brownie Carslake is dead, "starved himself to death, he did," trying to counter the weight nature was imposing on the ageing figure that once was the best known in British turfdom.

The big-framed Australian who fought to the last to retain his fading fame as "one of the greatest jockeys of all time" died in the quiet of his little home in nearby Whitbury, a week after ill-health forced him to retire.

Brownie, born Bernard Carslake 55 years ago, had dieted for years, fighting the always-inept scale to weight his muscular body was meant to carry. Weight to him was an obsession. However, the diets have meant an end years ago to the riding career he established during 40 years in racing saddles, both in the United Kingdom and on the Continent. Through all that time he ate only a minimum of food.

"Sure he gained fame," they said. He made quite a lot of money, too, but he spent it lavishly. At one time he was one of the greatest figures around English turf. Three times he won the St. Leger, twice, the 2,000 Guiness and once the Oaks.

Battle With Hose Lines

Edmonton's Firemen Douse Calgary To Aid War Effort

SINCE the first lost patrol pitched camp at the junction of the Bow and Elbow and plumb disgusted with the surrounding country, called it Calgary, there has been a fine rivalry between that spot and Edmonton. That rivalry has many a hectic page in its history, but a brand new chapter was written with fire hoses here Saturday night at Clarke Stadium.

It was a water fight between teams of the Edmonton and Calgary fire departments, feature event of the Edmonton department's drive to raise funds to aid in the relief of British fire fighters—the men who are doing such courageous and effective work in the bombed areas.

WE WON IT

Edmonton won a clean cut victory in this battle of hose lines here. At a signal from the referee, both teams advanced toward each other from lines marked on the grass about 20 yards apart. The firemen wore full rubber togs and they really poured it on each other. The blasts from the nozzles were powerful enough to bowl a man head over heels if he were not well braced and supported, by his team mates.

The Edmonton squad chose a war of movement and kept working around the Calgarians in a half circle that prevented the Calgarians from getting the range with their stream. In something a little over a minute, the Calgarians were routed.

VICTIMS OF TREACHERY

The teams then shut off their nozzles and Edmonton started to walk off the field. The Calgarians then did us dirt with their water—a bit of a feat in itself. They suddenly grabbed their hose and turned on the Edmonton boys who were nearly off the battle ground. The Edmontonians raced for their hose line and got the nozzle opened, but they couldn't get organized under the blast hitting them and were quickly washed over the line and out.

Staged under the flood lights following a softball game between the two fire departments, the water fight drew a crowd that filled the main bleachers of Clarke Stadium. It was originally planned for each department to have two nozzles in action and the lines were laid that way, but Calgary failed to bring along rubber suits, so Edmonton had to drop one unit and give their suits to the southerners.

WE GET TRIMMED

The Calgarians won the softball game 19-9 with a fine display of what it takes for this pastime.

The game was started with Chief MacGregor of Edmonton throwing the first ball to Chief Carr of Calgary behind the plate with Deputy Mayor Patteran batting and Mayor Andy Davison of Calgary as umpire.

Net proceeds are expected to be over $600 when all returns are in.

Alberta Playoffs Start

Ellisons Beat Centrals 6-2 In First Of Softball Games

Lethbridge Ellisons took a one-game lead over the Centrals in the men's senior provincial playoffs when they defeated the northern Alberta champions 6-2 at Kingaway Park on Sunday afternoon.

The Edmonton team won the exhibition game while followed 7-3, when the southerners went up in the third inning to allow six runs to score. The balance of the playoff games will be played at Lethbridge next week-end.

The opening game was plenty fast and until the sixth when errors began to creep in was a good sample of senior class softball. The visitors made one double play in the fifth and the Edmonton boys had a pair of double killings, one in the first and the second in the seventh.

Merle Hunt did the heavy stick work for the Ellisons. He had a pair of hits in four trips to the plate, one being a homer in the ninth which drove in two runners ahead of him and the other a double in the sixth which also sent in one run.

Joe Sekui also had two for four. Andy Young and Ken Stewart of Lethbridge Leafs' hockey fame and Eric Dedham, a former city baseball player were along with the south winners.

Renn Mitchell, formerly of Salt Lake City did the chucking for Lethbridge and his chief claim to fame appeared to be a very peculiar delivery, although he did allow only four hits. He struck six and walked five.

Al Young for the Centrals issued three walks and struck out four.

First run for the Centrals came from Sammy Stevenson's double and another by Nin Gray. The other results from a single by Joe Sekui, a walk to Blake Barker and an error in handling Jack Graham's ground-er.

Ellisons' runs in the sixth were started on's walk to Luciani and then Renn Mitchell singled. Phil Bastin was safe on an error and one run was in. Andy Young singled and Merle Hunt's double did the needful for the other pair of runs.

Hunt's homer in the ninth with two on bases through errors brought in the other trio of Lethbridge counters.

SECOND GAME

Dave Rae pitched Centrals to a 7-4 win in the second game on Sunday afternoon, holding down the Ellisons to seven hits. In addition he took care of some runs in the fourth, hoisting the ball over the left field fence.

A big third inning for the Centrals netted six runs. Four hits in a row by Joe Sereda, Sam Stevenson, Fred Kolaire and Nin McBeth were included in the attack.

Aussies Beaten By Picked Team

A picked Edmonton eleven defeated a cricket team from the R.A.A.F. on Sunday afternoon by a score of 125 to 36. The Aussies had won against another city team last week.

Anderson, bowler for the Australians, is one of the best seen here this year and is particularly dangerous with a new ball. Pacey is also good.

Both Croft and Grant were in fine form for the city team and didn't give the Aussies much chance.

Gift Horse Wins $45,420 Futurity

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Alsab, little brown colt purchased at auction for $700 a year ago, drove to a length victory in the $45,420 Futurity at Washington Park Saturday to become the nation's leading two year old, both in money winnings and performance.

The free striding youngster, owned by Mrs. Albert Sabath of Chicago appointed Eddie Arcaro to his 1:11 to equal Tiger's time in winning the 1937 Washington Park Futurity.

Woolford Farm's entry finished two lengths in front of Valdina Farm's Valdina Orphan.

As a result of his triumph, Alsab earned $32,575 to boost his total earnings to $68,070 in his six stake triumphs on Chicago and New England tracks.

Gas Ban Result of Lack of Foresight

The Duchess and I recall the day
I'd say, "Fill 'er up," and we'd speed away,
To go $5 till a cop yelled, "Hey!"
But we don't talk about that.

YASSAH, my old sea-green sweetheart with the black and white shoes mopes along somewhere south of 60 now, wondering, probably, whatever happened to her boy friend's heavy foot.

The Duchess and I are doing our patriotic bit to conserve gasoline in view of the new shortage and all. At least, that's the thumbs-up way to say it. The thumbs down or cold truth of the matter is that we're afraid our license will be suspended if we obey our normal and familiar impulse, for the registrar of motor vehicles in our section of commonwealths has said he'd ground any gasoline jockey caught doing more than 40 out in the timothy and 25 inside town limits, and regardless of motor vehicles is a very bad man to say "Oh, yeah?" to, even if you say it to yourself.

I accept this situation with only a reasonable amount of grace. My country is not at war. If it were, they could have my share of jigjuice, and even the Duchess to burn it. I am furthermore convinced that we ought to help the nations fighting Hitler, and if that means gas, I'm willing to contribute. But it seems to me that a sensible government, operating with a reasonable amount of intelligence, could have handled the situation in some more sensible fashion than merely yanking the cars out from under a specialized segment of the population with what amounts to no preparation and no warning.

LEGITIMATE BUSINESSES HIT

MODERN cars, modern tires, modern drivers and modern super highways have all been crowding the speedometer for at least a quater-century. A lot of them crowd is too much, granted, but nevertheless more of "the American way" than many people have stopped to realize, predicated on the free and reasonable use of an automobile at any and all times.

It is even reasonable to say that the automobile has completely changed the living habits of who can say what percentage of our general population? It must be 50 per cent; it might be 75.

Try for one week in a suburb where problems 100,000 people are dependent on their private jaloppies to get back and forth. There are no street car lines within three miles of the part of town I live in. There's one railroad about a mile away but it shuts up for the evening before it could have any use for it. Leaving the automobile out of it, there'd be nothing to do but walk or use roller skates and it's a good 10 miles from my formal place of business and my usual haunts of relaxation.

But there's a bigger question than what happens to the suburban individual caught in this sort of jam. It's a question of what happens to a lot of legitimate business all over the east that need live unless a lot of wheels roll at a fair rate of speed. How about the resort hotels reachable only by car, the new and highly profitable winter sports business that has pulled so many up-country communities back on their feet? Here comes the autumnal leaf season. What of that?

QUESTIONS IN EASTERN MINDS

PEOPLE can still fill up day times, you say, and drive 40 m.p.h. It simply takes a lot longer to get there that way, patriotism or no patriotism, law or no law. If this type of conservation goes along 40 is just the first stop anyway. It is reasonable to state that a completely maximum speed of 35 miles an hour for automobiles in the United States would hamstrung enough of the nation to break the country financially.

If you don't believe this, take a drive along some once heavily-travelled road that has lost its major traffic now since some bigger and better highway was put through a few miles over the hill. Note the empty gas stations, shops, stores, filling stations, roadside stands and even village enterprises boarded up and falling to ruins since the trade took the other road. That's why it could have stood a lot of study and planning and some intelligent preparation. There was a lot of questions in a lot of eastern minds. Why shouldn't the whole country laugh the rap, instead of just the east? Why couldn't a sufficient reserve have been tanked in there if they were going to ship it to Canada, actually at war with the Axis and therefore deeper, at least theoretically, in actual crisis involving American life? Was the line and buy all they want.

Poo-hoo, Mr. Ickes, the Duchess and I are co-operating—co-operating in what promises to be the bankruptcy of our district unless some sense of reason may be arranged that Air Corps slogan to read "Keep 'Em Rolling." Here's a question that even intelligence would have gone a long way, and where none whatsoever was applied.

Sharkey Trims Peeved Wrestler

VALLEYFIELD, Que., Aug. 18.—(CP)—Jack Sharkey, former world heavyweight boxing champion, got his ed out his old meal ticket here Sunday night in self-defence against Lou Newman of Montreal, who left the ring without finishing match he was refereeing, and punched his way to popularity with 1,500 spectators.

George Koverley and Kut Kovitch were paired in the main bout, but before Koverley took the final fall, a fist-battle developed between the contestants and Sharkey's closed hand connected with Koverley's nose after ordinary means failed to halt the scrap.

Koverley took the second fall in five minutes and the third after giving his triumphs apparently signalled a postscript tussle with the referee. Sharkey pounded Koverley out of the ring in two minutes and took a big hand.

Duane Barr Cops Calgary Golf Open

CALGARY, Aug. 18.—(CP)—Duane Barr, assistant pro-shotmaker of Earl Grey Club, won the city open golf championship Sunday. It was his third open title, as he was the victor in 1936 and 1937. Four strokes behind Johnny Aitken, Inglefood pro, two strokes behind Alfie Pow and one stroke behind Bert Greer, when the first half of the tournament was completed on Aug. 10, Barr shot a two-under par 69 yesterday in the morning and even par 71 in the afternoon at Regal course for a 140 total and this added to his previous 138 gave him a 278 grand total, one stroke less than his nearest rivals, Bill Hudson and Alfie Pow.

Snead Victor In $5,000 Open

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, Va., Sunday won the $5,000 Thrues-Union open by shooting 73-67—140 in the 36-hole final round for a total score of 279.

Slammin' Sam, who won the Canadian Open recently, was seven strokes better than Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., who also had 72-67—139 Sunday to his previous 145 for a 284 total.

Sneads victory was worth $1,200, bringing his 1941 total earnings to $8,911. Hogan collected $750 and Wood $550. The cheque brought Hogan's winning this year to $12,733 and further establishes him as the big money man of golf.

Butter Shows Increase For Seven Months

In the seven-month period, January to July inclusive, Alberta creamery butter production totalled 21,151,366 pounds, according to figures released Monday by D. H. McCallum, provincial dairy commissioner. This is an increase of 2,998,186 pounds or 16.5 per cent over the corresponding period of 1940 when production was 18,153,180 pounds.

In July, Alberta creamery butter production totalled 5,217,074 pounds against 4,841,773 pounds in July, 1940, an increase of 375,301 pounds or 7.8 per cent.

Canadian production in the seven-month period under review totalled 166,000,240 pounds against 153,907,942 pounds in the corresponding period of last year, an increase of 12,092,298 pounds or 7.9 per cent. In July the all-Canadian production totalled 39,336,498 pounds against 39,607,803 in July of last year or a decrease of 271,305 pounds of .7 per cent.

INCREASE SHOWN

Mr. McCallum stated that "practically all districts of Alberta suffered from high temperatures and lack of moisture during the month of July. In spite of these adverse conditions the production of creamery butter showed a satisfactory increase.

"Harvesting has now become general in all parts of the province which will affect cream deliveries. This year's crop will be considerably below normal, but few districts will lack feed for dairy stock, these factors together with rising prices for butterfat should maintain interest in dairying," he reported.

North American Life Has Report

The recently released July records of North American Life Assurance Company fit in with the general picture of improved business conditions. A ten per cent rise in sales over July 1940 was reported, with most branches sharing in the increase.

The new roster of Production Club members, which was also published on July 31, showed that in spite of heavy enlistments the number of members was practically on a par with last year. The record of four Edmonton men was sufficiently high to win them this honor, awarded annually by the company for volume and quality of the year's business. They were H. H. Free, J. C. Nattress, G. L. Gould, and J. F. Schurman.

During June, the agency force of North American Life was almost entirely occupied with the sale of Victory Bonds. Organizers, team captains, and individual canvassers were provided in every province in the Dominion. In addition to the high total of bonds sold by its representatives, the company subscribed to $3,000,000 of the June issue.

Through The Mill

These bright lights of the big city have caused a heap of trouble, but the glamor of the great white way still seems to be an irresistible magnet despite the harsh lessons of the past.

The young woman who appeared before the magistate on Monday was a good example. She has a record of visits to various jails that almost made the cadi blush with embarrassment. As a matter of fact, he didn't even attempt to read it. He gave a glance at the lengthy scroll handed him by the crown prosecutor. Then with a pained look addressed the prisoner, charged with intoxication for the umteenth time: "The only way we can keep you away from the city is to keep you locked up. I think it must be admitted this girl has had every reasonable chance."

Counsel for the accused admitted this was only too true but pleaded for leniency on the grounds that his client "isn't very bright." She had actually gone to the country, but got on a train in the north country bearing 200 young men who were coming in to join the army and before she knew it she was back in the big city. The court sighed and sentenced accused to a fine of $50 or in default of payment serve two months in jail.

Two young women, charged with stealing a quantity of women's clothing, after allegedly breaking into a room in a city rooming house, pleaded not guilty. They elected for summary trial and the cases were set over until August 28.

All men in uniform are invited to attend the show, as guests of the horticultural association. Due to the present health regulation forbidding persons under 17 years of age to congregate in a public place, children will not be admitted to the show.

Officer Reports 36 Polio Cases

Status of infantile paralysis in this province remained unchanged with 36 cases over the week-end, according to Dr. A. C. McGugan, provincial director of communicable diseases.

Dr. McGugan stated he had heard unofficially that two new cases had appeared in Calgary, but he had not yet received official confirmation of them.

Efforts are being continued by the department to prevent children congregating at swimming pools, playgrounds, picnics and theatres and all possible means are being taken to advise people of preventive measures.

Applications For Postponement Of Army Duty Heard

National War Services Board on Monday was dealing with applications for postponement of military service from 21-year-old recruits who are being called for service as active members of the Canadian army in Canada and from men who served 30 days of military training last October, who are being recalled for active service in Canada for the duration of the war.

This latter group is composed of men in age groups between 21 and 25, inclusive.

NEW YORK ARCHBISHOP SPEAKS HERE

Canadians Of Slav Origin Urged To Support War Cause

Crowds Welcome Garrison Units Home From Camp

Thousands of cheering residents greeted the seven units of the Edmonton Garrison, Canadian Army (Reserve) on their return Sunday from two weeks annual training period at Sarcee Camp, southwest of Calgary. At the C.P.R. station, on Jasper avenue, 101 street and 100 avenue, large crowds gathered to welcome them as they swung along in soldierly fashion.

Sun-tanned, hard as the proverbial nails and showing the beneficial effects of their intensive training, the soldiers were obviously pleased with the reception and marched in their best parade ground manner. Promptly at 8:20 p.m. the train puffed into the station and came to a halt. Many spectators lined the railway embankment north of the high level bridge and many more gathered at the station and in its environs. Cheers were exchanged between the troops and spectators and the ringing of engine bells and tooting of sirens, added to the welcoming din.

GREETED BY FRIENDS

No sooner had the train come to a stop than troops poured from the cars, Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., Area Commandant, was on the platform to greet his returning soldiers. With him were Major Eric Edwards, acting officer commanding No. 13A District Depot and Lieut. J. L. Stone of the depot staff. Officers commanding various units were welcomed as they stepped onto the platform.

Wives, mothers, sisters, brothers, children and friends of the soldiers were on hand.

"Hello, Bill;" "Cheerio Tom" and other greetings were exchanged between soldiers and spectators as the troops busily and methodically went about the task of getting themselves and their equipment from the cars onto the platform.

Trucks, with crews, were on hand to take kit and stores. On all sizes there was orderly bustle as officers and N.C.O.'s assisted the men in the work on hand.

Debarkation was completed in a few minutes and the units were formed up ready to move off.

CHEERED BY SPECTATORS

City police were on hand at the station and on the streets to keep the traffic arteries open and keep the crowds back. From the station the troops marched east along Jasper and as they proceeded, crowds on the sidewalks greeted them with cheers, while hundreds parked in automobiles by the curbs, waved and honked car horns.

The regimental and bugle bands of the 2nd Battalion Edmonton Fusiliers and the 2nd Battalion Edmonton Regiment and the bugle band of Petrol Park, 2nd Corps Troops, were in the parade to provide martial music that roused both soldiers and spectators to heights of enthusiasm.

Units and their officers commanding were: 61st Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, (R.C.A., Major

Post-War Federation Of States Proposed: Ideals Above Politics

All possible support, human and financial, on the part of all Canadians of Slavonic origin, should be placed behind the Allied cause to ruin the destruction of Hitlerism, and thus provide for the establishment of a Federation of Slavonic States, was urged by the Most Rev. Archbishop Adam of New York, in a lecture he delivered in the I.O.O.F. hall on 103 street, Sunday evening. The meeting passed a resolution urging Canadians to give increased support to the war effort.

The meeting, under the auspices of the Russian Greek Orthodox Church Society, attracted a near capacity audience, which heard the archbishop outline reasons for the rapid downfall of the Slav countries. "There was disunity within the countries. There was disagreement among the countries, and yet they were all Slavonic. Their downfall would not have been possible had all the Slavs placed their national ideals above politics," he stated.

Archbishop Adam outlined the democratic set-up of the British empire and used that as a glaring example of strength in unity. He stressed the need of a similar arrangement for all Slavonic states of Europe immediately after the war is won.

"This," he stated, "would be obtained through Clause 3 of the Churchill-Roosevelt agreement, which would provide for complete autonomy for all minorities as well as those countries which have already been oppressed by Nazism."

DEFEND RUSSIA

"We Canadians and Americans of Slavonic origin must permit our national ideals to rise high above our politics. We must, as the British have done, overlook Communism and defend Russia as a nation from that octopus—Hitler," His Holiness stated amid loud applause.

Archbishop Adam traced the history of hardships under which millions of people of Russian, Ukrainian and Ruthenian origin labored under Polish, Magyar and Rumanian regimes and stressed the need of unity of the Slavonic people. "This," he stated, "can become a reality through Clause 3 of the Churchill-Roosevelt agreement."

To work towards this end the audience passed unanimously a resolution urging Canadians of Slavonic origin to give all possible support, human and financial, to Premier Churchill, President Roosevelt, and all other Allied leaders, in the hope that their full support will help hasten the destruction of Hitlerism and thus provide for the establishment of a federation of Slav states in Europe.

FORWARD COPIES

Archbishop Adam was asked to send copies of this resolution to the proper authorities.

People from as far as Redwater and Chipman were present. Others came from Mundare, Star, Skaro, Calmar, Sprucedale, and Wostok. Guests of honor included four old-timers from outlying parishes, Michael Cherniak of Skaro was chairman of the meeting. He was assisted by Rev. Karabilnoff of the Sprucedale parish.

Improvements At C.P.R. Station

Improvements to the approaches to the Canadian Pacific Railway depot at Jasper and 109 street have been completed, marking one of the largest single property improvements in the city this year.

The entrance and exits to the station have been paved with concrete, the timber sidewalks of the approach have been replaced by concrete walks and the roadway north of the station has also been paved.

The work was supervised by J. Ivan MacKay, superintendent of the C.P.R. Edmonton division and was carried out by the Crown Paving company.

Alberta Will Prosper After Conflict Ends

Alberta with its vast, undeveloped natural resources will prosper immensely in after-the-war development and rehabilitation, it was stated here Monday by John R. MacNicol, M.P. for Toronto-Davenport and president of the Dominion Conservative party.

Mr. MacNicol arrived here Sunday and on Tuesday will leave for the north to view mineral and power development. He will go to Waterways by train and to Yellowknife by boat, returning here in two weeks. He expects to leave then by car to visit the Peace River country as far as Fort St. John and Hudson Hope.

Northern development holds a great future for this province and especially for Edmonton, he said.

"One of the matters discussed by the president and the prime minister at their epoch-making Atlantic meeting was the use of the world's natural resources in after-the-war rehabilitation, not only within the victorious British Empire and its allies, but in the lands of our vanquished enemies," Mr. MacNicol said.

"In that rehabilitation program Canada will play a great part and here in Canada, her mighty natural resources should bring a vast increase in employment. For years one of my hobbies has been travelling in old and new parts of Canada to survey our resources —the last two years particularly in our northern areas.

"This year I am going north in your magnificent province to visit the Peace, Athabasca, Slave and Great Slave areas of Alberta and the North West Territories. From what I have seen in preparation for my trip, Alberta is blessed with exceptionally vast possibilities in mineral and power development—resources of incredible value in their magnitude, the development of which will play a great part in after-the-war rehabilitation and should rapidly increase the size of your beautiful capital to 150,000 and up to 200,000 population.

UNLIMITED ADVANTAGES

"I expect when I come back from first-hand investigations in the western Peace area of minerals and farming and from Great Slave lake that I shall be greatly thrilled with the unlimited potential advantages to accrue from development in Northern Alberta.

"I declare in favor of the oil possibilities on the Athabasca, which I read are marvellous, and the coal areas at Drumheller and in the foothills and Turner Valley's oil.

"Alberta is bound to greatly prosper from any program of after-the-war rehabilitation," he concluded.

Sees Prosperity

John R. MacNichol, M.P. for Toronto-Davenport and president of the Dominion Conservative Party, who said in an interview in Edmonton Monday that Alberta, with its resources, is bound to prosper in post-war development. He is leaving Tuesday to visit northern Alberta and the mining areas of the North West Territories.

To Compete In East Marathon

Out of the north came, on Sunday, not a "sour dough" with his bags of gold, nor a prospector to tell of his stakes, but an attractive 22 year-old girl, dressed in a blue and white print dress and a sports jacket in the most up-to-date style. She travelled by air, and in her "pack" was a portable typewriter.

Miss Anne McKenzie, stenographer in the Whitehorse Y. T. office of the civil aviation branch of the federal department of transport since last March, is on her way to Toronto.

TO COMPETE

Miss McKenzie came to Edmonton via Yukon Southern Air Transport, en route east, to compete in the third international typing marathon at the Canadian National Exhibition. She will leave the city Wednesday via Trans-Canada Air Lines for Toronto.

Miss Goldie Hiller, winner of the typewriting contest in Edmonton, sponsored by The Edmonton Bulletin, will also be a member of the Canadian team. Miss Hiller has represented Edmonton for the past two years. Miss McKenzie took part in a typing contest at the Canadian Exhibition in Toronto in 1937.

To reach Toronto in time for the marathon, Miss McKenzie, the "Flying Typist", will be in the air for more than 36 hours, and will cover approximately 3,160 miles.

In March of this year, Miss McKenzie who was employed in the Regina office of the Dominion department of transport, was transferred to the Whitehorse office with other members of the staff.

Fusiliers Take Top Standing During Sarcee Camp Training

One of the proudest units of the Edmonton Garrison, returning from Camp Sarcee on Sunday after 15 days of the most strenuous training ever allotted to the reserve army, was the 2nd Bn., Edmonton Fusiliers, (R)CA.

Careful account of the efficiency and accomplishments of the units at camp was kept by the district staff officers in charge of training and on all points, in competition with every unit in Alberta, the Edmonton Fusiliers stood highest.

GOOD ON RANGES

The Fusiliers especially distinguished themselves on the rifle ranges where the highest percentage of their strength, on any unit in the district, achieved the qualifications of first class and second class shots.

The marksmanship standards are set by the British army and a first class shot must have a 75 per cent score or better and a second class shot must have 50 per cent or better.

Firing on the ranges at this year's camp called for grouping on the

3,000,000 Now Acreage Slash Official Says

W. C. Barrie, Alberta wheat acreage supervisor, says the wheat acreage reduction for 1941 in this province under the Federal reduction scheme, will reach 3,000,000 acres. Mr. Barrie returned to Edmonton over the week-end after visiting the southern section of the province.

Mr. Barrie said that throughout Alberta the reduction plan is "working smoothly" to cut down wheat production and revitalize wheatlands by summerfallow and sowing of other crops.

Participating in the scheme are 62,000 of Alberta's 76,000 wheat farmers. They will receive more than $11,000,000 in bonuses. Mailing of cheques began August 1. Alberta objective in the scheme is 8,000,000 acres.

Hundreds Apply To Join Air Cadet League Here: Enrollment Now Opened

Enrollment in the Edmonton unit of the Air Cadets League of Canada got away to a brisk start Monday, with hundreds of boys seeking application at the league's headquarters here over Mike's News Stand. It is expected by officials that nearly 300 prospective cadets will have been interviewed by 6 p.m. The office opened at 9 a.m., and a long line of applicants was on hand when "recruiting officers" started work.

The Air Cadets League has been formed to provide training to boys between the ages of 15 and 18 in many of the subjects taught in the Royal Canadian Air Force, including drill, physical training, seronautics, navigation, mechanics and the theory of flight. Cadets, successful in the courses offered, upon reaching the age for enlistment in the R.C.A.F., will be given two months' training credit.

First applicant to be interviewed was John Roger Ingraham, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ingraham, 10219 99 avenue. Jack accepted the form immediately, filled it out, got his parents' signature and returned it to the office with his application filled and accepted all before noon. Jack is a student at Victoria high school, and is a well-known city athlete, playing for several junior and juvenile sport clubs.

MEDICAL EXAMINATION

After applications have been accepted, the boys must pass a medical examination, based on R.C.A.F. qualifications. If successful in passing these tests, they then take the Air Cadet Oath and are enrolled in the league for training.

At the same time that applications are being received from prospective cadets, officials in charge of the plan here are asking for persons with necessary qualifications to volunteer their services as instructors in the various courses to be offered the cadets. Applications are being received at the office over Mike's News Stand.

Present plans call for the unit here to be organized into 10 flights of 50 cadets each, with the present recruiting limit set at 500 boys. Training will be given two nights a week, with all courses based on R.C.A.F. standards.

A refresher course is being planned by the R.C.A.F. for all those volunteering as instructors, so that training may progress as quickly and efficiently as possible.

Recruiting hours at the Edmonton office, above Mike's News Stand, are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Boys are interviewed as to eligibility for the league and, if satisfactory, are given application forms, which must be filled out, signed by parent or guardian, and then returned to the office and filed.

THOSE IN CHARGE

At the headquarters Monday to handle the crowd of young applicants were J. W. Wildman, chairman of the Edmonton committee in charge of the league; A. D. Harvie, K.C., honorary secretary-treasurer; John Michaels, chairman of the finance committee; Colin D. MacKenzie, William Muir, C. D. Jacox, E. Hornung, Mrs. Henry White, and Mrs. L. McGillis.

Author of "Slava Bohu," a human study of the Doukhobors in Canada, Mr. Wright is now planning a book depicting the story of the Ukrainian - Canadians.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

There's an urgent necessity for saving gasoline in order that the air forces and other mechanized divisions of the armed forces may be adequately served. Commercial firms in Edmonton have already announced measures that will result in greatly lessening the consumption of gasoline for delivery vehicles. Private car owners are also lining up in the big drive. What do you think of this suggestion from one owner of a car? He is leaving his car in the garage for one day out of the seven.

THE ANSWERS

CONST. JAMES McMURRAY: I'll leave my car in the garage for the whole seven days if it's necessary. But I certainly agree that if every ordinary motorist left his car in the garage one day out of the seven it would result in a tremendous saving. At the same time it would not curtail commercial services.

* * *

R. STETTON, salesman: I think any motorist would be willing to rearrange his affairs so that his motor car would be burning no gas for at least one of the seven days in a week. And it would certainly mean a great saving.

* * *

CHIEF CONST. A. G. SHUTE: I think the suggestion of keeping your car in the garage for one day is an excellent one. It would certainly result in a big saving of gasoline.

Swim Pools To Be Closed Here To Stop Polio

The municipal swimming pools will be closed this week, as a measure against the spread of infantile paralysis, it was announced Monday by A. W. Haddow, city engineer.

An order of the provincial board of health last Tuesday banned children 17 and under from swimming pools, theatres and other places of public assembly, but the new order will close the pools.

The East End and West End pools will be closed Monday night (tonight) but the South Side pool in Queen Elizabeth park will remain open until Friday night. Ticket-holders over 18 years of age may swim at the South Side until that time and the usual single swims may be had there.

Reason for keeping the South Side Pool open is that the Western Canada Championship for the one-mile swim for the Wrigley cup is scheduled to take place there Friday night. Swimmers will be here from Vancouver, Winnipeg and other points.

They were no new cases of infantile paralysis (poliomyelitis) in the city over the week-end, it was reported Monday by Dr. G. M. Little, city medical officer of health.

At present in the isolation hospital are five city cases and eight from outside points. Most of these are of a mild nature.

Wedding Vows Are Pledged At Week End

Bouquets of stately gladioli in various hues mingled with fern to form a lovely floral setting in the west end home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Howlett for the wedding on Saturday evening, of their daughter Edith Florence Howlett to Mr. William Spooner Elliott of Viking, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. A sweetheart neckline, tiny covered buttons to waist and a matching embroidered jacket were interesting details of her frock. Her only ornament was a small gold locket, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a shower bouquet of white Killarny roses.

Soft organa blue sheer fashioned the pretty gown worn by the matron of honor, Mrs. C. M. West, sister of the bride. This was designed floor-length with deep neckline, three-quarter sleeves daintily French tucked, tight bodice and bouffant skirt. With this she wore a large white picture hat and carried a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas.

No "Conspicuous" Make-Up Allowed In Women's Corps

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—(CP)—These are a few of the things there won't be in the new Canadian Women's Army Corps: "Conspicuous" make-up, highly-colored nail polish, bracelets, earrings or "trinkets."

With handbags, umbrellas and canes they are banned from use under C.W.A.C. regulations made public today by Defence Minister J. L. Ralston. And the only rings allowed will be wedding and signet rings, or engagement rings after an officer's or volunteer has received permission to marry from her district officer commanding.

And here are a few other rules:

Clothing must be neat and kept well above the collar.

"Gloves when not worn must be carried and not tucked into belt or shoulder straps."

"Jackets must not be worn unbuttoned, and can be taken off only on informal occasions such as working in an office.

"The haversack which will replace a handbag will be worn over a sling over the right shoulder, with sling for the water bottle over the left."

UNIFORMS

Uniforms for officers and other ranks will be similar in design and detail. As in the army, officers on appointment or promotion will receive an allowance for uniform and equipment.

Articles such as aprons, working denim overalls, mitts, gauntlets and other equipment required for special employment will be issued as required.

Underclothing, toilet articles and necessaries will not be issued but allowances at the rate of one penny per week will be granted on enrolment, with an additional 5d quarterly.

Further details as to details of uniform and badges will be issued shortly.

PROBATION

Recruits while serving their probationary period may wear the uniform of the auxiliary to which they were formerly attached, or civilian clothing. Until Mr. and Mrs. D. Tip From Army: Meaty Meals Build Energy

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

If you're another of the multitude with a boy or brother in camp, and his letters tell you anything at all about a khaki-clad lad's bill of fare, then you already know that our army gets plenty of energy-making meats in its diet. And if you've an army of your own to feed—a hungry husband and husky, active children—you lead them often to the iron and protein bin yourself.

Vegetables and fruits are essential, it's true. So are dairy products, whole-grained cereals. But the real test of your ingenuity is in keeping enough meat in your menus, serving it interestingly, and holding down the budget.

Low-cost meats prepared with special sauces and stuffings enable you to juggle all three at the same time. For flavorful example:

(Serves 4 to 6)

Two cups diced cooked veal, 1 cup diced cooked ham, ½ cup diced cooked potatoes, ½ cup cooked peas, ½ cup cooked carrots, ¼ cup diced raw celery, 1½ cups left-over gravy, salt to taste, pepper, biscuit dough.

Combine meat, vegetables and gravy. Season. Heat to boiling, then turn into casserole. Cover with baking powder biscuit rounds. Bake in hot oven (450 degree F.) until biscuits are browned and well done, about 20 minutes.

Here are a few menu suggestions for these hot days: Broiled hamburger patties, large buns, cabbage and carrot slaw, baked fresh pears; vege-able meat balls, buttered spaghetti, raw carrot a ripe fruit compote; veal on skewers; steamed brown rice, green salad, cherry brown betty; cold ham, hot potato salad, grapefruit salad, open-faced apple pie.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Tomato and lemon juice, scrambled eggs, whole-wheat toast, coffee, milk.

Luncheon: Fried cornmeal mush, brown gravy with left-over vegetables, peaches, tea, milk.

Dinner: Flank steak with sausage, baked potatoes, green corn, radishes, stewed plums, coconut cake, coffee, milk.

McKenney On Bridge

By WM. E. McKENNEY, America's Card Authority

The number of New Yorkers who have established themselves in bridge on the Pacific coast is surprising. I dropped in one evening at the Langdon Bridge Club in Los Angeles, operated by Lee Langdon, a former New Yorker who is one of the greatest auction rubber bridge players ever to sit at the table.

Rubber—None vul.

South	West	North	East

Opening—♣ 2. Par 18

Many of the movie stars enjoy rubber bridge at Langdon's club. The night I dropped in, Binnie Barnes was playing in rummy George Burns of Burns and Allen fame, and George Slone were playing rubber bridge, and Lou Holtz was kibitzing. Lou couldn't resist the temptation to get in on the discussion of today's hand after it was played.

When West failed to lead a club, declarer made a grand slam. A small slam was cold against any lead. Lou Holtz didn't wait to find this out. After the opening lead was made and before dummy went down, he remarked, "You missed the boat."

He had been kibitzing South. With South's hand, he said, he would have opened the bidding. Having failed to do so, he would have bid at least three hearts over North's opening bid; and having failed to show strength, he would have bid five or six hearts later.

Who can criticize this analysis, even from a kibitzer?

Long-Waisted Panelled Dress

You'll discover real dressmaking fun and satisfaction—when you stitch up Pattern 4862 by Anne Adams. A front-buttoned style design for the thirty-four-to-forty-eight size range, it magically slenderizes your figure with long, vertical lines. And by making it yourself, you'll be able to include all those little niceties of detail and fit that spell smartness. The smartly cut, gathered side bodice sections give long-waisted lines, with the front seams forming low points and the back seams slanting. Add gently curved revers—or leave the neck a simple V-shape. And choose between short, three-quarter and long sleeves. For striking color, the sleeves side front and back bodice sections may be in gay contrast!

Pattern 4862 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 4 yards 35 inch fabric.

Send 20 cents in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly Size, Name, Address and Style Number.

Dorothy Dix Says:

A man always feels in his secret soul that he has done his wife an inestimable favor by marrying her and saving her from being an old maid. Also, he feels that she should be down on her knees in gratitude to him for supporting her, although she may earn her board and keep a hundred times over by cooking, washing, scrubbing and pinching pennies in his service, and he often wonders what would become of the Little Woman if he should be taken from her. Even the law classes a wife as dependent on her husband, but it appears that this is an error and that in marriage husbands are the clinging vines and not wives.

One of the things that wives never cease marvelling over is how their husbands ever appeared in public decently clothed, or managed to get anything to eat before they took charge of them, and how a man who doesn't know enough to come in out of the rain can be trusted to run a bank or carry on a green grocery.

Perhaps few men stop to think how dependent they are on their wives. They just take it for granted that their Martha will go on making them comfortable, catering to their appetites, taking care of the children, keeping the home fires burning and the household machinery running on oiled-bearings. It is only when they lose them that they realize that it was a woman's hands that held their little world together.

Tragic and terrible as it is for the bread-winner of a family to die and for a widow to be called upon to keep her home going and support her children, it is not as difficult a problem as it is for a husband to have to substitute for his wife and be mother and father both to his children.

Statistics tell us that married men live longer than bachelors. This makes husbands dependent on their wives for their very lives, for it is the wife's nagging about pulling on his rubbers and muffling up his throat, and staying in bed when he has a bad cold, and going to see the doctor about that tired feeling that saves many a man from an early grave.

The Bible adjures us to comfort the widow and wipe away the tears from her eyes. It says nothing about any obligation to console the widower, but, in reality, he deserves our sympathy just as much as the widow does, for every husband is more dependent on his wife than she is upon him.

DOROTHY DIX.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

When grandparents say, "My grandchildren are more fun than my own were," they are voicing a profound truth.

Divorced of any responsibility for the behavior of their grandchildren, the admiring and devoted grandparents can just sit back and enjoy these extraordinary beings.

Everyone tells me about their children; now, I'm going to retaliate by telling them about my grandchildren. Put it down to the heat, I'm not given to this sort of thing ordinarily.

I have three grandchildren, two boys and a girl. The oldest boy and girl belong to my younger daughter, the second boy to my only son.

Billy, dear soul, is nearly 8. He was always a sturdy, healthy baby until laid low with a virulent infection which has left its mark on him to this day. In spite of it, he is a strong, wiry child, seldom sick, but no one can imagine what happens to the food he eats. It certainly never goes to make fat.

He plays hard, is easily hurt by reproof or the actions of his friends, and shows it. Life will never be as perfect as Billy expects it to be. He loves school and Sunday school and goes unimpatiently of God. In fact he remarked recently that he'd like to see his "real" father, which somewhat disturbed his Daddy.

He's extremely clever with his hands, uses tools with ease, and has a tremendous memory. He liked to be read to at one year, and like many children, as soon as he could talk could recite his rhymes and whose stories by merely seeing the pages turned.

He's going to be a conscientious student; because he wants badly to be a success at whatever he tries. Suzanne, the imp, is going on three. She is one of those dimply children everyone longs to squeeze. But she is adept at evading such nonsense. Only when she wants something from you is she willing to snuggle. She walked around her pen at 7 months and alone at 10. This still is an illustration of her strength and independence. She wan's to do everything for herself.

She looks at you with a twinkle in her eyes that is irresistible. And everything she does is an "act". When she cries, it is whole-heartedly. When she smiles you would give her your all. She eats with gusto, drinks with gestures, and yesterday, enclosing her fingers in a tight pocketbook, she held her fingers to her face fluttering them like leaves and with a murderous look at the offending pocketbook, told the world, "I pine my fingers. I pine my finners." She has the imagination and vitality to make a drama of the least event. You never grow tired of watching her.

David, bless him, was 6 months old yesterday. He weighs nearly 19 pounds, eats a variety of good foods three times a day, likes and digests everything, has never been sick. His trademark is his infinite good humor. Play riotously with him and put him down and he still smiles. He wakes with a grin and goes to sleep without a whimper.

Points For Parents

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

This

Not This

Father: "You take your little wheelbarrow and be the man who carries the grass from the little piles that Bill rakes up over to that big pile—will you, Jimmie?"

Father: "Mother, come here and get Jimmie. He's too little to really help and he's scattering the grass all over the yard as fast as Bill rakes it up."

Often it takes very little ingenuity to change a small pest into a big helper.

No one has ever seen a sweeter, better baby.

Our leaflet, The Problem of Relatives, should include "no bragging about grandchildren," but it deals with the behavior we dislike in relatives. You may have it by sending your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred of this newspaper. A self-addressed, three-cent-stamped envelope should be included for mailing the leaflet.

Minute Make-Ups

To give a fresh look to the nails quickly—paint the tips with white nail enamel. It's very effective with sun-tanned hands. A stream-lined finish, that is, base to tip, using white enamel, is stunning if you are sun-tanned and wearing pure white!

PLANTS DO NOT ALL HAVE LEAVES

It is generally said that all plants have to have leaves, but this is not entirely true. The cactus family is an exception. The sharp spines on cactus are probably the remnants of what were once leaves, but the green part of the plant is not leaves, but stems. In these stems is stored water and chlorophyll (green matter) for producing food materials. Asparagus is another plant without leaves. Still others are the butcher's broom, Tamarisk tree, grape, (West Indies), duckweed, Mormon tea, dodder, beefwood trees and raffleia.

Tot In U.S. Centre Saves Second Life

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 — In Washington, the little heroine of the day is seven-year-old Margaret O'Brien—who numbers two life-saving episodes to her credit. Margie was out riding her tricycle with a five-year-old girl friend, Loretta Parlon, the other day when she heard a terrific screeching of brakes and a bang—and then she saw a big truck careening toward her and Loretta. Too little and too well to yell, little Margie said she just jumped off her bike and pulled Loretta out of the way. The truck just missed her and it ploughed over the sidewalk and right through a nearby front yard.

This rescue occurred in the same spot where another one first brought Margie fame two years ago. At that time, her baby sister, Kathleen, stepped out in front of a speeding car and Margie darted out into the street to pick her up and carry her to safety.

According to the happy Loretta, Margie now is her "very best" friend, besides being her life saver.

City Expects To Raise Half Of Army Quota

Drive to fill the 15th Canadian Army (A) quota was intensified Monday, according to officers of the Edmonton Garrison. The present requirement for Alberta is 543 men and the quota is to be filled by the end of this month.

The response to recruiting here has been steady. Between 10 and 15 men a day have been applying at No. 3A District Depot, Prince of Wales Armory and with this number going forward, it is felt that by the end of the month, this city will have contributed about one half the required quota. It is expected the other half will be provided principally through Calgary and other southern Alberta recruiting centres.

ALL BRANCHES

All branches of the service require men. Artillery, infantry, engineers, signals, infantry, armored units of various kinds, anti-aircraft and antitank and others.

Tradesmen are specially required but those men physically fit who desire to enlist, should not hold back on account of lack of technical training as this can be provided through army trade schools which are now functioning in various centres.

Many splendid opportunities are available to young men to provide themselves with a trade which will be of inestimable value in fitting themselves for rehabilitation after het war.

C.N. Worker Loses Foot In Accident

Slipping beneath the wheels on an incoming C.N.R. freight train near the North Edmonton Stockyards at about 9:30 p.m. Saturday, Mike Fedorow, of 10534 98 street, lost his left foot and suffered severe injuries to the left knee in addition to having his right leg broken in several places.

The injured man was rushed to the Royal Alexandra hospital in a Smith's ambulance. His condition Monday was said to be fair to good factory considering the extensive nature of the injuries.

Fedorow, a C.N.R. laborer, was the only one of the party with two companions, Paul Okurily, 9638 106A avenue and Paul Chichoiki, 10344 100 street, from Riley, who was not injured in the mishap. Fedorow's companions jumped off the moving train without mishap and immediately rushed to the assistance of the injured man.

They applied a tourniquet to the severed limb and this stopped the rapid loss of blood.

Inspt. Mike Kelly and Const. Dean of the city police department responded after a call to the railroad crutser car in which they were patrolling, and ordered an ambulance on arrival at the scene of the accident.

The train, a west-bound "speed" freight, has no scheduled stop at North Edmonton.

Hope For World Peace Seen In Allied Meeting

As the vision of the prophets and the prophetic writings of the Old Testament gave promise of universal peace, so today a new hope for the world lies in the historic meeting of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, Rev. Dr. E. T. Scragg stated Sunday. Dr. Scragg conducted the united services of Wesley and Robertson United churches in Wesley church Sunday morning.

"Arching the skies," he said, "is the rainbow of hope for universal peace to come through better understanding between nations. No one can deny that the people of the world sense the need of security and the need for each nation to work out its destiny as an individual can, and this meeting has brought the hope of that universal peace and security to come," the minister said.

It took a war, he declared, to arouse the consciousness of the world for need of security, even though the sense of a lack of security has existed for some time. "No one can deny," he stated, "that the various economic theories being presented today have not some foundation in the feeling that security is no longer man's possession."

"The minister stated that with the meeting of the Prime Minister of England and the Presidents of the United States, a great understanding among nations was foreseen, preparatory to universal peace and security.

At All Saints' cathedral Rev. Canon A. M. Trendall conducted matins and preached the morning service.

Rev. Alex. Stewart was the guest preacher at Garneau United church, Sunday morning, and at Holy Trinity church, the rector, Canon G. G. Reynolds conducted the service.

FAITH BRINGS PEACE

Rev. C. Theis, pastor of Bethlehem church, Chicago, in a sermon at Grace Lutheran church Sunday, told members of the congregation that "Faith, above all perplexities of life, brings peace and happiness to a believing heart." He said that in a time of stress it is of no value to resort to blasphemy and cursing. Rather, he said, people should pray to God, asking His intercession.

Mr. Theis, prior to moving to Chicago six years ago, was director of missions of the Lutheran Church for British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

2,000 Persons On Pilgrimage

Approximately 2,000 residents of St. Albert and surrounding communities, including about 400 from Edmonton, attended the fourth annual pilgrimage to the Grotto of Lourdes at St. Albert Sunday.

Archbishop MacDonald of Edmonton officiated at the main service which started at 2 p.m. with a procession from the church to the grotto. Father Pelletier of Legoff, Alta., and Father C. Forcier, of St. John's Juniorite college, Edmonton, assisted. Public prayers, a special blessing of approximately 25 sick perzons and benediction of the blested sacrament made up the ceremonies at the grotto. In church, a veneration of the "relic" was held.

Masses were held in the church at 8 and 9 a.m. and in the open air at 11 a.m. with Father Tetrault and Father R. Yott, both of St. John's Juniorite College of Edmonton officiating. Confessions were heard.

A special service attended by more than 75 Indians was performed by Father Comire, Rt. Albert, in the Cree language. The service began at 1 p.m. and lasted an hour.

City and District Airmen Get Wings

More men from the Edmonton district received their wings Saturday as members of the first graduating class at No. 15 Service Flying Training School at Claresholm. The air force wings were presented by Air Commodore A. T. N. Cowley, air officer commanding the R.C.A.F. in the district. The men were W. S. Puller, Delia, Alta.; J. F. Reilly, Jasper; W. R. West, M. W. McLaughlin, K. A. Moderwell and D. E. West, all of Edmonton.

Getting Around

by increasing menu prices in cost, rather than five-cent units. The operative, whose firm has branches in several western centres, declared information given him was that other firms, similarly with stores in the west, are going to do likewise. The practice may not become general and there has been no action by restaurant, cafe or lunch room owners to make the move applicable to all places where food is served.

* * *

Under the proposed system as outlined to me, you are likely to pay six or seven cents for the refreshing beverage for which you have heretofore paid five cents. One may obtain, say, a lettuce and tomato sandwich for 17 cents. Perchance a full-course dinner that has been priced at 35 cents in future might be 37. On the other hand, there is the possibility that a ham sandwich and a glass of milk may be obtained for 25 cents reduced from 25. One point emphasized in the material received by my operative from company moguls, was that as the public, due to the war, are becoming accustomed to handling coppers to a greater extent than ever before, there will be no objection to the system.

Consideration has been given to whether customers would just as soon pay 10 cents for a drink with the intimation that if they rather than go to the trouble of breaking a five-cent unit. But, experience has established that what they would prefer this inconvenience rather than be levied any more than is absolutely essential. I may say that the prices quoted above are merely coincidental and for illustrative purposes only and are not to be taken as official.

* * *

I was impressed with the appearance of an advertisement in the columns of this newspaper in which a departmental store sought desirable girls for service as saleslades. This indicates changed conditions since the war broke out. In the past, the observer frequently has heard young women declare that employment in store was difficult to obtain, in view of the large number on the waiting lists. Inquiry elicited the information that a good many of the girls of a type desired for this work have been absorbed in the marriage market.

The war has provided numerous opportunities for employment. Recruiting of government activities has opened stenographic, secretarial and clerical positions. Then, various industries engaged in war production have taken in a great many of the fair sex and various armed services are forming or have formed auxiliary women's corps, which are removing others from normal employments fields. Women are certainly taking an increasingly important role in the regular economic life of the country as well as in its war effort.

Public Accounts Will Be Printed

Public accounts for the provincial fiscal year which ended March 31 last have been placed in the printers' hands and are expected to be ready for distribution about a month. It was learned Saturday from reliable sources. September 15 has been suggested as a tentative date for release.

In the meantime Hon. Solon E. Low, acting premier and provincial treasurer has released an interim statement showing the status of provincial finances for the first three months of the current fiscal year, which commenced April 1.

The public accounts, if released within the next month or so, are a little earlier than usual. As a rule it takes several months after close of the fiscal year to prepare and release them. Last year the public accounts were released on December 10, the lateness being due to occupation of staff with extraneous matters, such as Rowell-Sirois commission work. This year, without such a burden, the staff has been able to complete the accounts earlier.

Sessions For C.C.F. School Are Concluded

Sessions of the C.C.F. summer school at Camp Keewaydin, Elk Island Park, concluded Sunday after ten days filled with discussions, and talks of distinguished social leaders.

In speaking on the "Concentration of Industrial Control Through Monopoly Growth", H. D. Ainlay, at a session last week, explained the loss of investor control and management, through enlargement of development, particularly as represented in holding companies. He stated that 200 combinations controlled 5,000 industries and plants with a capitalization of $7,000,000,000, and of these one-third was controlled by seven combinations.

FARM PROBLEMS

Prof. A. Stewart of the University of Alberta, spoke to the group on agricultural problems. He classed agriculture as a hazardous occupation and said that the burden of risk borne by the individual farmer should be lifted. Crop yield insurance —pooling arrangements—and further governmental assistance and subsidies, were methods of doing this Russell Love reported on the growth of the co-operative movement in the west.

BANKING, CREDIT

H. E. Spencer, of Edmonton, gave two addresses on the subject "Banking and Credit." Mr. Spencer, as one of the Social Credit insurance committee of the House of Commons for 14 years, drew on a wealth of knowledge of the subject. He gave a non-technical explanation of how money or purchasing power was brought into existence by the banking system. He dealt with the problems of inflation and deflation and how these can be avoided. This followed a condensation of the history of money and how the banking system came into existence.

Fusiliers Win Top Points At District Camp

100-yard range, application firing on the 300-yard and 500-yard ranges, rapid fire, firing from the kneeling position and snap shooting on the 300-yard range.

Efficiency and keenness of the men in the unit throughout the camp was shown in their winning of the Lieut. Isaac Trophy after four days out of the 14 days it was awarded. The award was made daily after a rigid inspection by the camp field officer.

At the end of camp the pennant was awarded to the Fusiliers as a permanent possession. Lt.-Col. H. B. Jamieson, commanding officer, announced that he would present the flag to Maj. William Thompson, who is attached for five years to the unit as chief instructor. The pennant will be an inspiration to the school cadets and other boys and girls, as a symbol of the fine standing of the regiment of which their principal is an officer.

DEFENCE SCHEME

The battalion took part in the defence scheme at the camp when they marched out to posts in the "M" area north of the Elbow river and the "B" area south of the Elbow and guarded these posts for 24 hours. Besides hailing all citizens and checking their national registration cards, they guarded against mock "saboteurs" from the infantry training centre at Currie Barracks.

On conclusion of the scheme, in which various units took part for four days, staff officers stated that the battalion scored a high in efficiency on their patrol duties.

When the battalion reached its headquarters in Alberta shortly on Sunday evening, Lt.-Col. Jamieson presented officers' sticks to Fus. W. Hall, of the headquarters company and Fus. B. Richards of "B" company, who were chosen as "stick men" or colonel's orders on the march. The sticks given the Fusiliers mounted guard at camp.

"It is a great honor for a man who is chosen to carry the colonel's cane as stick man and any man who wins this honor works for it. You men have worked for it," Col. Jamieson said. The stick is awarded to the smartest soldier on the guard.

CAMP STRENGTH

The battalion had a camp strength of 26 officers and 350 men. All these one officer and 16 other ranks attended the all ranks camp school, commanded by Capt. E. E. Jarvis. Several members of the signal platoon were attached to the camp headquarters signal school and established communication lines for the four days of the tactical defence scheme. One corporal took a specialist course in the Lewis gun.

On the returning troop train the unit's bugle band played at Lacombe and Wetaskiwin where members of "D" company detrained. The bugle band was duty band four times at camp, with members of the brass band joined with the band of the 2nd Bn., Edmonton Regiment, (R) CA, to form a composite band.

Flying School

Lt.-Col. His Honor J. C. Bowen, lieutenant-governor of Alberta, officially opened No. 15 service flying school, R.C.A.F. at Claresholm Saturday afternoon. On Sunday he visited Cochrane to unveil a cairn in memory of two local airmen killed in an accident there a few months ago.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

NORA was in the bedroom when Matthew arrived but at the sound of his voice she appeared saying, "Hello, Matt, how are you?"

"Don't speak to me!" he stormed, "if it hadn't been for you this wouldn't have happened. You lied to me, Nora."

"Just a moment,"-his sister said calmly. "Sit down and let's talk this over like civilized people. There's no use getting excited and it will be better for everyone concerned if you don't say things you'll be sorry for later."

Jimmy and Kathleen on the davenport had remained silent but now Jimmy said, "I'm the one to blame, Mr. O'Connor. But I love Kathleen and we're going to be married. Surely there is nothing wrong about that."

"At her age there is everything wrong about it," Matt asserted, refusing to be seated. "Kathleen has a great future which she is renouncing to keep house for a man who can never make more than a bare living"

"That's not true," Jimmy denied. "I've a good job and eventually I'm going to have my own shop. That's as secure a future as any one can have nowadays. And when I am called by the National Guard I'll be a first lieutenant. I can certainly take care of a wife then. Plenty of others do."

But this was not really the issue.

"A screen test isn't offered to just any girl," Matt reminded them. "But since Kathleen has passed up her chance at that the least she can do is come home for awhile. She isn't old enough to be married and if she doesn't want to make anything of herself, I'll give up my plans." He turned to his daughter to say pleadingly, "That's fair, isn't it?"

"It's too late now," she said, pitying him. "If you had let me see Jimmy and go out with him, we probably wouldn't have been married so soon. But our plans are all made, now. I'm sorry, Daddy."

Mistaking her sympathy for weakening Matthew poured forth a torrent of appeal to her affection. He missed her. The apartment was so lonely. He had devoted his whole life to her and now she was deserting him when they might have had several more years together. He had tried to make her happy. Hadn't he given her everything?

A NORMAL LIFE

"Everything but what I wanted most," Kathleen insisted. "The right to choose my own future. The chance for normal wholesome living. For years I've been denied the fun and freedom of other girls. I was always being forced to refuse invitations because I had to practice. I couldn't have a boy friend because you were afraid he'd get too serious. I've tried to please you because I loved you but I've loathed playing the accordion and marching in parades. I hated having to enter that beauty contest and wear a bathing suit so the judges could comment about my figure. I hated having to play up to Sammy just so he would give me an audition. And if I came back now you'd never stop hoping that I would change my mind."

Tears were in her eyes but her tone was unwavering. Matthew began, "I've been father and mother both . . ."

Nora interrupted him.

"That's where you're wrong, Matt. No mother with her daughter's best interests at heart would have forced her into a life like that. You've loved Kathleen in your own way but it's been a selfish love. To exploit her youth and beauty for your own satisfaction. If she had a great talent like her mother, there might have been some excuse but no one has ever considered her voice unusual. The thing you should have prized above everything else is her sweet, wholesome innocence which in spite of you, has not been lost. You ought to be ashamed of yourself. I've told you so before and I'm repeating it. What's wrong with her wanting to be married? She's only a year younger than Mary Agnes was when you persuaded her to marry you. You had many happy years together. Why then should you refuse that same happiness to your daughter?"

Matt sighed and averted his eyes. "Maybe Mary Agnes would have been happier if I hadn't married her," he said.

"You know better than that and so do I," Nora said kindly. "But even if it were true, the circumstances are entirely different. Kathleen has a right to a normal life and I think she has chosen wisely. For a woman, any career, no matter how satisfactory, is only a substitute. And believe me, I know what I am talking about. If I had it to do over again . . ."

Matthew said, "You think that now because you've had the career but you wouldn't have said so 10 years ago."

"All this discussion isn't getting us anywhere," Kathleen said sensibly. "Jimmy and I have made up our minds, and nothing anyone says can change us. So, let's all be friends again, Daddy."

She ran to put her arms about him, but he pushed her away.

"No. If you go on with this marriage, I'm warning you I'm through. I never want to see any of you again."

Her face whitened, but she said quietly, "All right, if that's the way you feel about it."

"Don't be foolish, Matt," Nora urged. "You're hurt and angry now, but you'll feel different later on. And you'll be the one to suffer most."

"I can stand it," he said with dignity. "I've had to give up everything else I've ever cared for. This is only one thing more. And that goes for you, too, Nora. From now on just forget that I'm your brother. You seem to mean more to Kathleen than I do, so we'll leave it at that."

JEALOUS

"He's jealous," Nora declared as he stalked from the room. "Playing the part of the unappreciated parent. Matt always did have to dramatize everything. He's the one who should have been an actor."

She spoke lightly to comfort Kathleen, who was weeping openly in Jimmy's arms.

"I'm so sorry for him," she sobbed. "He doesn't know what it will be like with no one to love him."

"Don't you worry," her aunt told her. "He may think he means it now but after a little time has passed he will be glad to forgive you. You'll see and for goodness sake, don't let it spoil your wedding."

"Nothing could spoil that," Jimmy assured her. "Could it, Kathleen?"

With tears wet on her cheeks she smiled at him.

"No, Jimmy! Let's take Aunt Nora and your mother out to see our apartment; shall we?"

APARTMENT

Half an hour later the four of them were surveying the clean, empty rooms with freshly painted walls and shining newly waxed floors. They were very merry as they opened cupboards and closet doors and pointed out where each piece of furniture should be placed. But the memory of Matthew, bitter and lonely, cast a shadow over Kathleen's happiness.

Poor Daddy! It was so difficult for him to accept defeat. If only he could have done so graciously. If he had consented to come to their wedding and be nice about it how wonderful it would be. Perhaps, she thought wistfully, he would do so even yet if he knew where it was to be. So she wrote him a note telling him they were to be married in the church they had been attending, Saturday at noon, asking him to come as if he had no threatened never to see her again.

McCoy Health Service

Many an innocent child is incorrectly and unwisely blamed for the bed-wetting habit when in fact the blame should be placed upon the shoulders of the parents. A baby, only a few weeks old can be taught to urinate only at certain times. Due to the fact that babies often live on almost an exclusive milk diet, they use such a large quantity of liquid foods that the bladder is really overworked all of the time and until the baby learns the habit of urinating at regular intervals he does not try to control the flow of urine. After all babies have very little to think about and until they have been taught proper control they let themselves go as easily as they would laugh or cry.

One of the most difficult problems is to control the bed-wetting at night on account of the sleep. Very often the child wets the bed either because the bladder is too full of liquid or because he has so far not learned to control the bladder in the unconscious condition of sleep. I find that in these conditions it is a very good plan not to give the child any liquid refreshment for a few hours before putting him to bed. In addition there is no children's disorder which responds to suggestion more readily than the bed-wetting habit.

When putting the child to bed at night the mother should impress upon her off-spring that he will wake up in the morning with his bed perfectly dry. If suggestions like these are repeated several times they are left as an indelible impression upon the child's subconscious mind, and it is surprising what satisfactory results may be obtained in this way.

The word "dry" should be used over and over again, and the one giving the suggestions must never, under any circumstances, use the word "wet".

Children are always especially sensitive to suggestion and often will respond the first or second night when this mental treatment is given. This sounds almost too simple to be true, but if you tried it once you would soon find what quick results you will get.

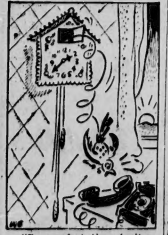

The practice of beating children in an effort to cure them of the bed-wetting habit cannot be too strongly condemned and I have yet to see any good results accrue from the beating treatment.

In addition I am a firm believer in the use of suggestion and psychology for correcting a child's misdemeanors. The lime-worn adage "Spare the rod and spoil the child" should have been thrown to the discard many years ago.

What To Do

You have seen people who literally "barge" into a room. Of course, there is nothing graceful or attractive about this and each of you vow secretly you'll never be guilty of a similar approach. Just as unattractive is the "shrinking violet" who cringes in the doorway and looks as though she would like to run away.

Also, not to be copied is the person who rushes into a room, stops short, quickly glances around, starts to approach one group, changes her mind—then eventually and unerringly finds the person for whom she is looking.

How much more poised to stop a moment in the doorway (it makes a frame for you and gives the people already in the room a chance to see you), look around leisurely, find your hostess and approach her calmly and quietly. Just moving slowly will give you a sense of well being that is lost the minute you begin darting about.

"FINE BODY OF TROOPS"

Lt. Col. Brown, accompanied by Major Edwards and Lieut. Stone had hurried from the station and took up a position on the south side of Jasper, between 103 and 104 street. As the units passed this point, officers commanding gave the "eyes right" and Lt. Col. Brown took the salute.

At the corner of Jasper and 101 street the units headquartered at the Prince of Wales armory—all save the Fusiliers—turned north on 101 street and marched to the armory. The Fusiliers went east on Jasper to McDougall avenue, south to Macdonald Drive and then westward, past the Cenotaph, and by 100 avenue to Victoria armory at 106 street and 100 avenue.

After watching the units march past, Lieut. Col. Brown declared: "They are a fine body of troops. They are well sun-tanned; they marched very well, indeed, and I thought in general, their bearing and demeanor bore eloquent testimony to the interest they had shown in their two weeks' training and the thoroughness with which their program had been carried out."

On arrival at their headquarters the men went through formalities to dispersing until next regular parade nights.

MEN FROM PEACE RIVER

Relatives and friends gathered at the Armories to wait. Happy wives, children and others were on hand with cars or other conveyances to speed their loved ones home.

Many of the men expressed their appreciation of the training gained in the two weeks. Some said they felt the long, wet march from Calgary to Sarcee, but after the effects of that wore off, the whole outlook was brighter.

In all there were about 50 officers and 750 other ranks from Edmonton units at the camp and about the same number from other provincial points.

Included in the Edmonton Regiment were about 75 men represent ing the Peace River company. They were quartered in huts north of the Prince of Wales Armory and they will take the next north-bound train for home.
